Dear Members and Friends,
Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat.

This year marks an important milestone for GAATW as we celebrate our 15-year anniversary.
Since GAATW was founded in 1994 by a group of women activists, the Alliance has been a strong advocate for a human rights-based approach in anti-trafficking work. Strengthened by the shared commitment of the Alliance, GAATW has grown into a mature network and has made many achievements in reaching international bodies, policy-makers and individuals across the world. Today, GAATW continues to be at the forefront in advocating for the rights of trafficked and migrant persons.
We take the opportunity to thank our members, allies and friends for being part of this meaningful, collective journey. We look forward to the years ahead to continue to work for the change we envision.

Over the years, we have watched the e-Bulletin grow and evolve to bring you updated and relevant information on trafficking and migration issues. We appreciate the continued growth of the readership - now over 600 people.

In this issue, we continue to share updates highlights from across the world, the work of members and the GAATW-IS, and a variety of reports. We also highlight an upcoming funding opportunity with the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery.

We look forward to your comments and suggestions on this issue.

Warmly,

The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

The International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC) demands justice after a horrendous acid attack on a woman trade unionist
Greece: Constantina Kuneva, the General Secretary of PEKOP - the Athens-based Trade Union of Cleaners and Domestic Workers and a migrant worker from Bulgaria working as a chemical cleaner in Athens, was attacked in late December 2008. She had been speaking out against the poor wages and harsh working conditions in this sector, where 80% of the employees are migrants and the vast majority are women. A few weeks before the attack, she had received threats owing to her trade union activities.
The ITUC fully supports the complaint of its Greek affiliate the GSEE, which “strongly protests the unacceptable delay and most deficient investigation procedure into the murderous attack”. The trade union movement also calls on the Ministry of Labour and the Labour Inspectorate to take immediate measures to end the serious and blatant abuse by employers in the cleaning and domestic service sectors.

GAATW applauds the efforts of the ITUC and their calls for investigation and justice. Greece will be hosting the 2009 Global Forum on Migration and Development; it is suspected that human rights will not be a focus on the agenda.

Call for an Independent Inquiry into Allegations of Abuse and Killing of Rohingya by Thai Authorities

Thailand: The Mekong Migration Network and the Action Network for Migrants (Thailand) sent an open letter to Thailand Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva to conduct an independent inquiry on the allegations of abuse and death of Rohingya people. The violations against the Rohingyas — a stateless Muslim ethnic group who fled persecution in Burma — were highlighted in January following accusations that the Thai Navy have been towing boats filled with hundreds of Rohingyas out to sea and setting them adrift. Hundred are said to have died at sea.

In the letter, the groups strongly urge the Thai Government to immediately ratify the International Convention and Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees and the International Convention on the Protection of Rights of Migrants and their families (1990). To read the statement, go to http://www.mekongmigration.org/?p=287

The global recession is increasing job insecurity among millions of migrant workers making them more vulnerable to abuse, say advocates

Manila: Companies around the world have stopped hiring and many are reducing workers in response to the global economic recession. The International Labour Organisation (ILO) forecasts that the crisis will result in the loss of some 20 million jobs, with migrant workers among the most likely to be affected. Ellene Sana, executive director of the Centre for Migrant Advocacy, Philippines, says migrant workers are now likely to be forced to accept lower wages and bad working conditions just to keep their jobs and support their families. http://www.ipsnews.net/news.asp?idnews=45516

Legislative Update

Law on human trafficking passes

Taiwan: Legislators in Taiwan have passed the Human Trafficking Prevention Act (人口販運防制法), which introduces measures to protect trafficked persons, obliging the police to protect trafficked persons and social workers/other professionals to offer social and legal assistance during police investigations or court trials. Victims will be issued conditional six-month temporary visas, which can be revoked by the Taiwanese government if the victims leave the shelter or break the law. http://www.taipeitimes.com/News/taiwan/archives/2009/01/13/2003433629

Government adopts anti-human trafficking law

Jordan: The Jordanian parliament passed legislation on 25 January 2009 to combat human trafficking in light of international complaints that local companies were sending foreign workers to Iraq against their will. The law includes the creation of an anti-human trafficking commission to oversee its implementation. The commission will be affiliated to the Ministry of Labour and will include officials from the police and Ministry of Justice. The law provides 3 years imprisonment for violators and permanent closure for companies convicted of the crime. Authorities also plan to set up temporary shelters for victims of trafficking.

REGIONAL/MEMBER UPDATES

Europe
BlinN (Bonded Labour in the Netherlands) has released a report analyzing the situation of victims of trafficking in migrant detention centres in the Netherlands. The report concludes that identification of trafficked persons by police is highly problematic because in most cases the trafficking situation is not recognized or appropriate protection is not given. BlinN has documented cases in which it has taken several weeks, sometimes even months, before police conduct an initial interview with suspected trafficked victims, and even cases where a statement is not even taken from suspected trafficked persons. This situation leads to victims ending up in detention centres and being deported, their rights further violated by those who have protected them. The report is available in Dutch only and can be downloaded from the website www.blinn.nl

Report Finds That Raids Are Not an Effective Tool Against Human Trafficking

The report from the Sex Workers Project at the Urban Justice Center, released just in time for the USA National Day of Human Trafficking Awareness on 11 January, summarizes findings from interviews with 46 people with experience of such raids, including service providers who have worked with hundreds of trafficking victims, law enforcement personnel, and 15 immigrant women who have been trafficked.

“Anti-trafficking efforts should be community-based, led by people familiar with sex work and other sectors where there is vulnerability to trafficking, such as domestic work, agricultural labour and service sectors, people who have experienced trafficking, social service providers, and immigrants rights advocates,” said Andrea Ritchie, Director of the Sex Workers Project. “This kind of approach would not only be more effective, but would build community and empower people who have been trafficked rather than subjecting them to the additional trauma of raids, arrests, and detention.”

The report can be found at: http://www.sexworkersproject.org.

IOM MRS N°36

Trafficking of men - a trend less considered: The case of Belarus and Ukraine

This study looks at male victim’s pre-trafficking situation (their personal, family and socioeconomic background), trafficking experience (recruitment, transportation and exploitation) and post-trafficking experience (including assistance and protection). The study draws on primary data collected from 650+ trafficked males assisted by IOM and its partners through IOM’s Counter-Trafficking Module Database (CTM) in Geneva, as well as qualitative information from interviews with and case files of assisted men. The specific experiences of trafficked males of Belarusian and Ukrainian nationality highlight some general patterns in terms of how trafficking takes place from these countries and, equally, some of the needs and interests of this specific target group. Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat.

As February draws to a close we are already in the thick of activity. This year is off to a bustling start, as is clear from the GAATW Members and GAATW-IS updates.

We remained heartened by the successes and celebrations this year and this month - GAATW Member Proyecto Esperanza launches its 10-year anniversary celebration, GAATW Member DSMC celebrates International Sex Worker’s Day in India, and GAATW turns 15! It is a mark of the continuing dedication and commitment to recognising the human rights of all people, including trafficked and migrant women.

February also marks the release of the second UNODC Global Report, which reviews the progress and implementation of the UN Trafficking in Persons Protocol from a criminal justice perspective. GAATW Staff attended the Asia-Pacific release of the Report and some of our reflections are included under Global Highlights below.

As well as the UNODC Report, the Resources section also includes three reports on the impact of the current economic recession on migration and decent work.

If you would like to contribute a short article or you would like to send your comments and suggestions, write to us at info@gaatw.org

Warmly,

The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

UNODC Global Report
GAATW-IS staff attended the Asia-Pacific launch of the 2009 UNODC Global Report on Trafficking in Persons. The key findings, released on 12 February 2009, seek to present the “state of the world’s response to the crime of human trafficking”. The Report describes itself as “an unprecedented view of the available information on the state of the world’s response to human trafficking”.

From the data gathered in 155 countries, the findings include the number of countries that have passed laws, the number of cases that are being prosecuted, and some tentative conclusions about the profiles of trafficked persons and traffickers. The final recommendation is for the creation of an “international mechanism to monitor trends and patterns of trafficking in persons” using criminal justice data.
For many of us working in anti-trafficking, it is useful to have an overview of the legislative efforts of governments and the types of cases that are being prosecuted in different parts of the world. It has made us reflect, however, about the “world’s response” that we are a part of. It is true that trafficking is now seen overwhelmingly by governments as a criminal justice issue, and the UNODC authors of the Report have accordingly centred their view on laws and crime control. But this does not recognise the diverse ways in which different organisations, state and non-state, are seeking to reduce trafficking or assist trafficked persons.

Reinforcing the law enforcement perspective of trafficking is also at the expense of promoting other actions that are urgently needed, such as women’s social and economic empowerment, greater human rights protections for identified trafficked persons, safer migration practices, and strengthened labour protections in sectors that are vulnerable to trafficking cases. For a truly global picture, these issues must be considered. If an international mechanism is established, more actors or agencies should be included so that a more global picture emerges.

The press releases accompanying the report also made us reflect on the way trafficking continues to be portrayed and sensationalised in the media. The headlines emphasised just one of the findings of the Report - the high number of women prosecuted for trafficking, relative to other crimes. This is interesting given that the report itself recognises that nearly three-quarters of countries did not have gender disaggregated data and it does not specify the types of trafficking-related crimes that women are being convicted of. It is possible that more women are arrested, because they might do jobs at the lower end of the chain, such as recruitment, and so are more likely to be identified by the trafficked person, or that women are more visible in brothels (the majority of prosecuted cases still involve prostitution) and are arrested as a result. We hope that this finding will lead to further analysis about how the justice system relates to women and about women’s role in the facilitation of other women’s movement, rather than a stereotyping of women as either victims (trafficked women) or criminals (traffickers).

The European Parliament voted in favour of the Directive providing for sanctions against employers of illegally staying third-country nationals (EU Employer's Directive) on 4 February 2009. Members of the EU parliament have described the Directive as a “tool to protect those working illegally of criminal bands.” However, PICUM together with European Network Against Racism (ENAR), the European Women’s Lobby (EWL) and the Platform of European Social NGOS (SOLIDAR) has issued a joint statement expressing concern over the Directive failing to recognize that undocumented workers have labour rights and disappointment about its focus on migrant status, rather than exploitation by the employer. Relevant documents are at: http://www.europarl.europa.eu/oeil/file.jsp?id=5489642

Americas

GAATW-Canada and the GAATW-IS organised a meeting on trafficking and the 2010 Vancouver Olympics with the Mayor of Vancouver, Gregor Robertson, the Vancouver City Manager, Penny Ballim, and other City Councillors. The aim was to discuss anti-trafficking activities planned for the Olympics and urge that any such activities be evidence-based and centre the human rights of people that might be affected. During this meeting, GAATW shared the experiences of German member organisation, Ban Ying, from the 2006 World Cup in Germany, as well as other concerns raised by GAATW members on this issue. Namely to avoid a ‘panic’ response based on claims of increased trafficking that are not supported by evidence and to consider other forms of trafficking besides sexual exploitation, that may occur during a major sporting event, such as forced labour in the construction of sports facilities. GAATW-Canada will continue to monitor the developments around trafficking and the 2010 Olympics. We hope Vancouver may become a ‘best practice’ example of responding to this issue. For more information, please contact Annalee (GAATW-Canada) alepp@uvic.ca or Zoe Bake-Paterson (GAATW-IS) zoe@gaatw.org

The conference will address social discrimination, stigma, and violence, focusing on marginalized communities, with special reference to sex workers. Over 3000 participants are expected to attend.

Another GAATW member, AFRO, based in Hong Kong will also be attending this event. For more information, please contact sexworkersday.durbar@gmail.com

FROM THE SECRETARIAT

GAATW Working Group Consultation Meetings

During the 2nd GAATW International Members Congress (IMC) in November 2007, members recommended forming two working groups to look into 1) review the decision making process within the alliance and 2) review terms and conditions of GAATW membership with a view to make it qualitatively stronger. These two Working Groups were formed in 2008 and include regional Member representatives, GAATW Board Members and IS Staff.
On 9-10 February 2009, the working group members gathered for the first time in Bangkok, Thailand, to identify the key issues and a process for ensuring the participation of all parts of the Alliance in the discussions. Questions will now be identified and given to Working Group representatives to discuss with member organisations and we look forward to hearing all views. The Working Groups will send a final set of agreed recommendations to the Alliance before the 2010 IMC, where they will be decided on. For more information, please contact: michelle@gaatw.org

Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR)

GAATW is coordinating a research project with GAATW members for 2009-2010. One of the objectives is to deepen understanding of ‘linkages’ between gender, migration, labour and trafficking, and document cases of migrant working women’s complex, lived realities. The research projects will bring to the profiles of these realities to the fore. FPAR methodology encourages action within communities following from the questions and findings that migrant women are raising, therefore strategizing and action will also play a big part in the FPAR process, following on the knowledge learned.

A call has gone out for members to participate. The application is due on 16 March. Please email Rebecca Napier-Moore at rebecca@gaatw.org if you would like to know more information or get involved.

GAATW Roundtable II

At the end of March 2009, GAATW is hosting a small gathering of scholar activists. This event follows a previous Roundtable in August 08, which looked at the interconnection of gender, migration, labour and trafficking. The focus of this second Roundtable is to question how recent currents in the global political economy are impacting migrant and trafficked women - a topic not often examined in anti-trafficking. The event is titled: Trafficking and the Political Economy: Impacts on the rights of migrant women from trade, the financial crisis and ‘new regimes of control’.

Contact rebecca@gaatw.org for more information.

Collecting Case Studies

As part of the Recognise Rights campaign, GAATW-IS is asking member organisations, allies and friends to send us case studies highlighting the negative impact of anti-trafficking policies (or other policies such as migration etc.) on trafficked persons or examples of ‘bad practices’ impacting trafficked persons. These case studies will be used in our advocacy and/or campaigning work, as well as in campaign material.

For more information, please contact zoe@gaatw.org

Reports

The Euro-Mediterranean Consortium for Applied Research on International Migration (CARIM) has published a series of 26 papers that were produced as part of CARIM research on Irregular Migration in Southern and Eastern Mediterranean Countries. Topics covered include demographic, economic, legal and social-political aspects of irregular migration in the Region. All documents are available at: http://www.carim.org/index.php?areaid=8&contentid=235&callTopic=7

The Migration Policy Institute (MPI) recently launched a paper analysing the impact of the current economic crisis on migration flows within the European Union: Migration and the Economic Downturn: what to expect in the EU. The paper looks at the effects of the crisis on migration fluxes (within and outside EU countries), how migrants are affected by this recession and how host communities will be affected by these immigration developments.
One conclusion is that migrants (both documented and undocumented) are among the most affected by the economic crisis since they are over-represented in sectors that are being particularly hit (e.g. construction and manufacturing). This same organization has also produced a similar paper focusing on the US context: Immigrants and the current economic crisis: research evidence, policy challenges and implications. Both documents can be found at: http://www.migrationpolicy.org

Women's Link Worldwide, an international human rights organization working to ensure that gender equality is a reality worldwide has released a new report called Migrant Women's Rights: An Invisible Reality (Los derechos de las mujeres migrantes: una realidad invisible). Women's Link Worldwide interviewed 130 women from Sub-Saharan Africa living in Morocco and Spain to expose violations to these women's human rights, including sexual and reproductive rights, and the multiple forms of violence migrant women face. The report is available (in Spanish only at the moment) at: http://www.womenslinkworldwide.org/pub_migrantwomen.html

The ILO Regional Office for Europe and Central Asia organized the 8th European Regional Meeting held in Lisbon on 9-13 February 2009. The meeting brought together government, employers and workers representatives to “look at the latest developments regarding the financial and economic crisis in the region, as well as to review the policy packages applied by different countries to mitigate its adverse impact.” As a background document for this meeting, the ILO’s Director General prepared a new report the called: Policy responses to the economic crisis: A decent work approach in Europe and Central Asia, which includes policy recommendations to governments in light of the economic crisis. All relevant documents are available (in English, French, Russian, Spanish and German) at: http://www.ilo.org/public/english/region/eurpro/geneva/what/events/lisbon2009/index.htm

Analysis

AWID has written a summary and reviewed the 2008 research report Rights not Rescue by the Open Society Institute on sexual health and rights of sex workers in Botswana, Namibia and South Africa. The report recommends a number of actions that should be taken to protect the rights of sex workers including decriminalizing sex work, recognizing and addressing the link between HIV transmission and the abuse of sex workers’ human rights. Rights not Rescue underscores the need for human and women’s rights movements to examine their own marginalisation of sex workers groups and work in solidarity with them. Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat.

March is the month of International Women’s Day and GAATW honours this day in our e-bulletin by highlighting a number of IWD events that happened in 2009 and by sharing women’s rights slogans from around the world with you. We continue to be inspired by women (and all the women of GAATW) around the world, who work unwaveringly to uplift women’s rights. Together we stand strong.

In this e-bulletin, we also share updates on GAATW’s work, such as advocacy on the first report by the UN Special Rapporteur on Trafficking, contributions from Members working in the region, and GAATW’s recent Roundtable on Trafficking and the Political Economy.

Reading over the articles and news highlighted in this issue, there is clearly a new trend of addressing the global economic down-turn and its possible impacts on migration, labour conditions as well as on gender aspects. Interim solutions imposed by governments to lessen the damage in their respective economies have been put forward, and we urge the governments to ensure that workers rights are protected at all cost. We look forward to hearing your thoughts on this issue, so please feel welcome to send us any comments or feedback at info@gaatw.org

Warmly,
The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

Celebrating International Women’s Day (IWD) 2009
Yakin Ertürk, UN Special Rapporteur on Violence Against Women, called on women and men to unite in times of economic crisis to stop the oppression of women. “The scale and impact of the current crisis is still largely unknown, but it is expected that women and girls in both developed and developing countries will be particularly affected by job cuts, los[s] of livelihoods, increased responsibilities in all spheres of their life, and an increased risk of societal and domestic violence,” she said in her statement on IWD 2009. Ms Erturk will be completing her term as the UNSR on VAW in June 2009 and will submit a final thematic report to the Human Rights Council which will focus on the political economy of women’s rights and its implications for violence against women.

Women’s Network for Unity (WNU) a collective of Phnom Penh-based sex workers and the Asia-Pacific Network of Sex Workers (APNSW) have spoken out against the newest MTV Exit (End Exploitation and Trafficking) campaign broadcast in Khmer in Cambodia, saying it supports the recent controversial anti-trafficking laws that have criminalized prostitution in Cambodia and led to extreme police brutality against sex workers.

New Director Appointed for US TIP Office
Luis C. de Baca was appointed the new Director of the Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking - the US Office that produces the annual global Trafficking in Persons report. Prior to this role, de Baca served as Chief Counsel of the Civil Rights Division’s Human Trafficking Prosecution Unit at the USA Justice Department. During the Clinton Administration, he was the Department’s Involuntary Servitude and Slavery Coordinator and was instrumental in developing the United States’ victim-centered approach to combating modern slavery. As a former U.S Department of Justice prosecutor he investigated and prosecuted a broad range of human trafficking cases and insisted on a multi-disciplinary response to human trafficking.

Europe
La Strada Czech Republic has recently translated a summary report of its research on the exploitation of Vietnamese migrant workers in the Czech Republic. The report, called Vietnamese Workers in Czech Factories - Research Report, is an outcome of the project ‘Support and Assistance for Persons Trafficked and Exploited in the Labour Market’ implemented throughout 2008. The report looks into the types of exploitation of Vietnamese workers in the Czech Republic and makes recommendations to address the weaknesses of the system of employment by job agencies.

The report will also be presented at the Joint Analysis, Joint Action - Conference of EU National Rapporteurs on Trafficking in Human Beings in Prague, 30 - 31 March 2009. This conference aims to build and maintain effective and efficient cross-border cooperation and information exchange in relation to human trafficking on the EU level, through enhancement of the role of National Rapporteurs or equivalent mechanisms.

To get a copy of this report, or for more information on the conference, please contact La Strada Czech Republic at: irena@strada.cz

YWCA Kitchener/Waterloo will be hosting the 3rd Annual World YWCA Breakfast Friday, 24

MAP’s Women Exchange (WE) Get Together was held 5-9 March in Chiang Mai, Thailand. More than 100 representatives of Burmese migrant women’s groups along the Thai border came together to share their experiences and to learn about the consequences of the economic crisis, which was this year’s theme. Each day saw a plenary session in the morning on issues related to the economic downturn and the situation in Thailand, and its consequences for women migrants. The afternoons were filled with workshops, including on trafficking, trade agreements, or sex, and with fun workshops in yoga, salsa or fruit carving. GAATW-IS led a daily workshop on human trafficking. During these workshops, participants shared examples of trafficking and smuggling, and discussed the roles of governments and NGOs in both preventing trafficking and offering protection should trafficking occur.

2009 International Women's Day (IWD) Celebrations:

In recognition of IWD, Asosiasi Tenaga Kerja Indonesia (ATKI) in collaboration with Komnas Perempuan and supported by GAATW, Women Empowerment in Muslim Context (WEMC) and Hong Kong University organized a roundtable discussion and launch of ATKI’s documentary film “Organizing for Change: IMWs Say NO to Overcharging” created by GAATW. For more information about this film and the event, please contact: ATKI-Hong Kong atkikhk_2000@yahoo.com or ATKI-Jakarta atki.indonesia@gmail.com

In celebration of IWD, La Strada International called for respect and rights protection for women migrant workers, who are vulnerable to trafficking in human beings. They highlighted the importance of understanding the gendered factors that increase vulnerability to trafficking, and to raise awareness of the rights violations that are the cause and the consequence of trafficking. LSI also identified a list of recommendations for states - if states are sincere in their wish to end exploitative practices and empower women to defend and enjoy their rights. Click here to read the LSI’s statement.

Manav Seva Sansthan (SEVA), a GAATW member in India, co-organised a series of workshops and meetings in Indo-Nepal border locations with CBATN, in celebration of International Women's Day 2009. This year’s theme was “Integrating gender-sensitive and rights-based approaches in addressing trafficking and migration issues”. Six events were organised to generate solidarity for working towards a better quality of life for women and children in South Asia. For more information about SEVA, go to: www.manavsevaindia.org

GAATW held the second in a series of three Roundtables last week focusing on the theme - Trafficking and the Political Economy: Impacts on the rights of migrants from trade, the financial crisis and new regimes of control.

From the 25-27 March, GAATW-IS staff joined in discussions with a group of ‘experts’ and long-time GAATW friends - Liepollo Pheko from the Trade Collective in South Africa, Shalmali Guttal from Focus on the Global South in Bangkok, Fanny Polania a GAATW founding member and consultant in Colombia, Vicky Nwogu from UNIFEM West Africa, and Jackie Pollock from the MAP Foundation in Thailand. The Roundtable is part of GAATW's research programme on ‘Linkages between Gender-Migration-Labour-Trafficking’. For more information about Roundtable II, please click here.

HAS ANYONE USED FEMINIST PARTICIPATOR ACTION RESEARCH METHODOLOGY?
GAATW is undertaking a Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR) Project. We have always prioritised this methodology in trying to understand experiences of migrating and trafficked women. We put out an application for research projects and have received many responses! We will be holding a FPAR Methodology Workshop with researchers at the end of May.

Have you used FPAR Methodology? We would be interested in communicating with people who have, and learning what your experiences are. Please contact Rebecca Napier-Moore at rebecca@gaatw.org.

Human Rights Council - Geneva, Switzerland
In March, GAATW-IS attended the Human Rights Council 10th session with GAATW member organisations Centro de Orientacion e Investigacion Integral (COIN) from Dominican Republic, Ban-Ying from Germany, and LSI. The aim was to see Ms Joy Ezeilo, the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons, especially women and children, present her first report and to meet relevant representatives of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and Inter-Governmental Organisations to discuss human rights approaches to trafficking. Ms Ezeilo’s report focused on trafficking in men and boys and addressing root causes of trafficking; working on facilitating a framework for a database disaggregated by gender, age, sector and region; and promoting a human rights approach to trafficking.

In response to the report, GAATW joined with Franciscan’s International and Anti-Slavery International to thank Ms Ezeilo for her human rights-centred and participatory approach to the issues and reliance on broad information sources. We also posed the following three questions:

1. How she plans to address the lack of attention paid to trafficking in men and boys and for forms of exploitation other than sexual?
2. We agreed that addressing the root causes of trafficking is crucial and asked her to take into account social and economic disparities and the demand for cheap labour as well as restrictive border controls
3. We welcomed her desire to look at the accordance of anti-trafficking legislation with human rights standards and asked her to consider non-conditional assistance, access to justice and compensation without discrimination as well as the UNTOC review mechanism discussions

GAATW and Franciscan’s International submitted a joint oral statement in response to the SR on Trafficking’s report.

Realising Rights - Health Training in Orissa, India
GAATW has completed the third and final phase of the women centred health care training in Orissa, India during 17-27 February 2009. Thirteen women completed the health training and are now gearing up for sharing their skills and knowledge in their communities. The women formed an informal group and named it Manjuati (the word for Henna in the local language - the plant not only signifies colour and celebration, it also has medicinal qualities.)

A Room of their Own
One of the many needs that the Manjuati women had was a common space where they could meet to share and discuss their work. Jo Jandai from Pun Pun seed saving and sustainable living farm in Chiangmai, Thailand and Nkhom Phetpha from a similar community in Yasothon, Thailand helped the women realise their dream to have a room of their own. Colleagues from Shakti Samuha, staff from GAATW-IS and some women from neighbouring villages joined in with Manjuati and staged a miracle in 14 days. They designed and built a room using sustainable materials - a mix of soil, water and rice husk for bricks and straw for roof. Taking up a concrete goal and completing it at the start of the group was a great morale booster. The women already have many ideas on how to strengthen their group and work on issues of health, violence against women and realisation of social and economic rights.

Freedom Network Conference - Dallas, Texas

The Freedom Network brings together diverse anti-trafficking organisations in the USA under the umbrella of a human rights-centred approach. At its annual conference members, non-members, governmental and inter-governmental representatives convened to discuss current anti-trafficking debates in the USA. GAATW was invited to attend, and carried out a workshop on the USA impact on global responses to trafficking. There was much discussion about the recently re-authorised Trafficking Victims Protection Act in the US and people’s hopes for the new Obama Administration as well as successful migrant workers’ movements and means of attaining access to justice for trafficked persons. GAATW-IS staff talked about the annual US Trafficking in Persons report published by the Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons, and raised some of the concerns identified by GAATW members regarding the TIP report. A recent report by Darfur Consortium, titled Abductions, Sexual Slavery, and Forced Labour in Darfur, finds that the Sudanese Government-supported militia (eg. the Janjaweed and the Popular Defence Forces), together with the Sudanese Armed Forces, have systematically abducted civilians for the purposes of slavery and forced labour as part of the Darfur conflict. The findings are based on information collected over the past two years. The report concludes that there is an urgent need to protect civilians from abductions and other serious human rights violations. “The scale and impact of the current crisis is still largely unknown, but it is expected that women and girls in both developed and developing countries will be particularly affected by job cuts, lose of livelihoods, increased responsibilities in all spheres of their life, and an increased risk of societal and domestic violence. A systematic gender analysis of the current economic crisis is critical for developing viable solutions and upholding human rights standards”

The GAATW e-bulletin is sent out to all member organisations of the Alliance as well as to many of its friends and sister NGOs worldwide.

- The e-bulletin is published every last week of the month. A Spanish version goes out three days after the English version. Sometimes additional follow up information and/or reminders are also sent via email to member organisations.
- Primarily a tool for communication between the International Secretariat and the Alliance members, the e-bulletin aims to cover a broad range of topics although trafficking related issues remain its special focus. We also use this e-bulletin to inform members about upcoming events and provide regular updates about the Secretariat.
- We strongly encourage members and friends to send us their input to the e-bulletin at info@gaatw.org
- If you do not want to receive this e-bulletin please send us a message at info@gaatw.org and we will delete your address from the list.

Dear Members and Friends,

Welcome to the April issue of the e-Bulletin. In this issue, we bring you news of the continued struggle of undocumented migrants traveling from Africa to Europe, an activity that aims to increase the recognition of workers’ contributions in a Middle Eastern country, and a seminar that addresses labour exploitation in the agricultural sector. In the Updates from the Secretariat section, we welcome a new colleague who has joined the International Secretariat, and share news about the international Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the upcoming joint Roundtable on Using CEDAW to Protect the Rights of Women Migrant Workers and Trafficked Women in South and Southeast Asia.

Friday 1st May will mark International Labor Day, a day to celebrate the many victories and struggles of labor movements around the world. There have been many achievements made in the history of labour movements - for example, the eight-hour work day, maternity leave, and a minimum wage - unfortunately even today these rights are not provide to many workers, especially migrant workers. With the global economic recession still threatening job security, this year’s Labour Day is a critical reminder that we must keep a close watch on workers’ rights and working conditions in all areas of work. In solidarity with the millions of working men, women, migrant, local, part-time and full-time workers of the world, GAATW echoes the calls of many for the full recognition of rights and just treatment for all workers!

As always, we welcome suggestions and additional information to share in next month’s e-Bulletin - What are you working on? What is happening with migration or trafficking in your country?

Warmly,
The GAATW International Secretariat

The seminar highlighted experiences and “lessons learned” in OSCE-participating States in the field of trafficking for labour exploitation in the agricultural sector, in particular in the areas of identification, protection mechanisms, national co-ordination among the services or authorities, and prosecution of cases. The seminar agenda can be found at: http://www.osce.org/item/37250.html. A full report will be published at the OSCE website in the form of an “occasional paper” by mid-May.

GAATW Board member attends the ECOWAS Meeting on Rehabilitation of Victims of Trafficking in Persons, 31 March - 2 April 2009
GAATW's Board Member, Victoria Nwogu, attended the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) Ministerial and Expert Meeting on the Rehabilitation of Victims of Trafficking in Persons. The meeting, held in Accra, Ghana, focused on the validation by experts and adoption by ECOWAS Ministers of a draft policy on the Protection and Assistance for Victims of Trafficking in Persons in West Africa. Through her participation in the Experts Meeting, Ms. Nwogu was able to advocate on a number of key points in the draft policy, including: the importance of employing the rights-based approach to victim protection and assistance; ensuring that views of trafficked persons are taken into consideration in initiatives that are developed for their benefit; and the need to establish a link between trafficking and migration in trafficking efforts, and including information on safe migration for people wanting to migrate as a way of preventing trafficking. The Ministerial meeting was attended by Ministers from all the 14 ECOWAS Member States. The recommendations made at the Experts Meeting were reinforced and the policy document was adopted.

ANPPCAN Liberia works to build the capacity of law enforcement officers
GAATW's new member organisation in Africa, African Network for the Prevention and Protection Against Child Abuse and Neglect (ANPPCAN) Liberia, conducted a week-long training for law enforcement officers and community members in some communities in Liberia. This was part of ANPPCAN Liberia’s ‘Women-Friendly Policing Campaign’, a year-long sensitization campaign which is aimed at improving knowledge, attitudes and practices of law enforcement officers in promoting women-friendly practices. Topics discussed during the training ranged from legislation related to violence against women to the prevention of human trafficking.

European Commission adopts new framework decisions on trafficking and exploitation
The European Commission has recently adopted the proposals for two framework decisions on trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation of children. The revised framework decisions on trafficking in persons will revoke the existing one from 2002. La Strada International commented on this development in their latest newsletter, saying: “The revised Framework Decision (FD) on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings, and protecting victims, takes on a broader approach than its predecessor and includes prevention and protection and is not exclusively focused on criminal justice.”

New colleague at the GAATW-IS GAATW-IS warmly welcomes Dewi Nova Wahyuni from Bandung, Indonesia who has recently joined the team. Prior to joining GAATW-IS, she worked as gender technical assistant for Conflict Early Warning System Program with Hivos in Ach, Indonesia. She joined GAATW’s Feminist Participatory Action Research project in 2000 when she was working with LRC-KJHAM. Dewi Nova will work as the Asia Programme Officer together with Aatcharaporn (Aat) Chaowahem from Thailand.

Roundtable on CEDAW, Migration and Trafficking
The Global Alliance Against Traffic in Women (GAATW) , Coordination of Action Research on AIDS and Mobility (CARAM Asia), and International Women’s Rights Action Watch (IWRAW) Asia Pacific are convening a Roundtable on Using CEDAW to Protect the Rights of Women Migrant Workers and Trafficked Women in South and Southeast Asia that will take place from 6-9 May 2009 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The purposes of the Roundtable are to:

- Explore the nexus between migration and trafficking in South and Southeast Asia in the context of migration for work, with a specific focus on the promotion and protection of the human rights of women through the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW)
- Review the position of migrant women within international and national legal frameworks and consider whether migrant women might find greater human rights protections within the CEDAW framework
• Develop strategies to promote the rights of migrant women using CEDAW

It is hoped that the Roundtable will enable an open and inclusive discussion on the situation of women migrant workers and trafficked women, and create innovative and collaborative strategies to guarantee protection of their rights. For more information, please contact: Caroline Hames caroline@gaatw.org

UNIFEM Forum on the Gendered Impact of the Economic Crisis on Women Migrant Workers in Asia, Bangkok, 23-25 May 2009
Dewi Nova Wahyuni and Rebecca Napier-Moore from GAATW-IS, and GAATW member Vichuta Ly from LSCW in Cambodia, attended the Forum. Two key messages that have come out of this forum have been: survival means earning more than minimum wage; and many migrant workers are being put into precarious situations because they are either no longer able to work overtime or are facing mass layoffs due to the economic recession. There is also evidence that women migrants are facing increased sexual harassment from officials, agents and brokers, and that some women face increased domestic violence as families are under great financial stress.

Some presenters and participants highlighted the need to renew looking at CEDAW (especially General Recommendation 26 on Migrant Workers), at ILO Convention 97 - Migration for Employment, and at the Migrant Workers Convention. Other speakers urged sending countries to provide assistance - economic, legal aid, counselling - for returnee migrant workers. For more information, please contact: Dewi Nova nova@gaatw.org

Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ), 16-24 April 2009
The CCPCJ meets annually and has a number of focuses, including ‘international action to combat national and transnational crime, including organized crime’ and is therefore related to the UN Convention against Transnational Organised Crime (UNTOC), parent convention to the human trafficking protocol. In April, the CCPCJ meeting coincided with the meeting of a working group set up to review the implementation of the human trafficking protocol, both were held at the UNODC headquarters in Vienna, Austria.

GAATW-IS attended the CCPCJ, gave a statement calling on UNODC to ensure that human rights are central in their coordination of anti-trafficking efforts, and spoke to delegates about the working group meeting and the possibility of a review mechanism to UNTOC.

GAATW member LEFÖ, based in Vienna, participated in a simultaneous meeting to discuss a Framework for Action against Trafficking in Human Beings which is currently being considered as another tool for assessing the implementation of the human trafficking protocol. The “World Migration Report on Managing Labour Mobility in the Evolving Global Economy
- Europe and its Neighbours: Perspectives of Origin and Destination Countries” meeting was held in Vienna on 10 March 2009.

The main purpose of the event was to present the World Migration Report 2008, and to have migration experts and representatives of migrant countries of origin and of destination in the wider European area comment on the accuracy and reality of the World Migration Report. Some of the issues raised by the report are (direct transcription in italics):

- Countries of origin: the main elements for an optimally functioning foreign employment policy, one needs to consider the regulation of private employment and recruitment agencies, the protection of workers, and the provision of support services.

- Countries of destination: need to meet specific labour market needs and plan for the safety of migrant workers. Key policy issues confronting countries of destination include the assessment of the need for foreign labour, the design of foreign labour admission policies, the rights of migrant workers, and the economic and social integration of newcomers.

Combating Trafficking in Persons: a Handbook for Parliamentarians

The Handbook contains a compilation of international laws and “good practices” developed to combat human trafficking. It offers guidance on how national legislation can be brought in line with international standards, for example, by defining trafficking in persons and criminalizing all its forms. It outlines measures to prevent the crime of trafficking in persons, to prosecute offenders and to protect victims, as well as advice on how to enlist civil society in the cause. The handbook is published by the UNODC in collaboration with the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).

GAATW e-Bulletin
May 2009

Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from Bangkok! We are bringing you our May e-bulletin a bit late because we wanted to share with you some updates from our recently concluded Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR) Learning Workshop held in Chiang Mai, Thailand from May 25-29, 2009. We thank all the participants for sharing their knowledge, stories, skills and smiles with their sisters throughout the week. The enriching experience has given us much positive energy to continue with our work in advocating for the rights of migrants and trafficked persons.

One announcement we would also like to share with you in this e-bulletin is that the deadline to attend the formal Civil Society Days of the GFMD in November 2009 has been extended until 8 June. For more information, go to: http://www.gfmd2009.org/

For this issue of the Global Highlights, we would like to share with you the EU Framework Decision on the prevention of human trafficking and protection trafficked persons and the opportunity it presents for advocacy in Europe. We also included news on Mozambique and other governments in Southern Africa regarding their efforts to combat trafficking, and an update on a possible policy change in the United States that will help trafficked persons seeking to stay permanently in the US.

News from GAATW members and the IS highlights TWC2’s Day Off Campaign for migrant domestic workers in Singapore, La Strada International’s statement on the EU Framework Decision, and updates on the GAATW FPAR Learning Workshop, the GAATW Regional Consultation in Latin America and the Caribbean, and participation at the Conference on Women, Immigration and Prostitution in Barcelona, Spain.

On behalf of GAATW, we want to extend our deepest appreciation and warm wishes to Eleanor Taylor-Nicholson who will be leaving her position at GAATW-IS and is moving on to UC Berkeley for her Masters of Law. Her dedication to her work in the GAATW-IS is truly admirable and will definitely missed by us all. GAATW-IS wishes her great happiness and best wishes in her next journey.

Warmly,

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

Mozambique: SADC Fights Against Human Trafficking
The Southern African Development Community (SADC) is designing a response to combat trafficking in persons. SADC held a three-day technical meeting in mid-May in Maputo, Mozambique to prepare a forum of ministers on the matter and to design a regional strategy to fight against the trafficking in persons. They identified the weak points in the fight against trafficking as the lack of specific legislation to prevent trafficking in most member states. Mozambique was the first SADC member countries to adopt a specific law against trafficking in people. Zambia and Tanzania have also enforced law to combat trafficking in persons, and governments in South Africa and Malawi are currently working on addressing it. http://allafrica.com/stories/200905270705.html

European Union Framework Decision on preventing trafficking in human beings and protecting victims is being revised
On 25 March 2009 the European Commission adopted the proposal for a Council Framework Decision (FD) on preventing trafficking in human beings and protecting victims, which will repeal the 2002 FD on combating trafficking in human beings. If adopted by the European Union, the proposed FD will include new elements such as substantive criminal law provisions, jurisdiction and prosecution, victims’ rights in criminal proceedings (including compensation), victim support, prevention and monitoring (including the establishment of National Rapporteurs or equivalent mechanisms). The new FD is a crucial document as it will be legally-binding for EU member states and therefore lobbying national governments at this phase will be fundamental in the incoming months. Click here to download the proposal for a new FD.

On 29 April the Group of Experts on Trafficking in Human Beings (set up by the European Commission) issued an Opinion on this FD proposal in which they made a set of recommendations, including non-conditional assistance for trafficked persons and in obtaining compensation. The Opinion of the Expert Group is not yet posted on-line, but if you wish to receive a copy, please contact: nerea@gaatw.org

US looking into relaxing visas application process for trafficked persons
The United States government is looking in to mechanisms that would allow trafficked persons and victims of serious crimes to have easier access to securing permanent residency in the US and be able to find work while waiting the decision on their visa applications. La Strada Statement and Recommendations on the Proposal for a Council Framework Decision on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings and protecting victims La Strada International (LSI) welcomes the Commission’s proposal for a revised Framework Decision on combating trafficking in human beings that includes improving the protection of and assistance to trafficked persons. LSI hopes that this revision will pave the way for additional and more specific EU measures on the protection and assistance of trafficked persons in the future. LSI also envisions a more integrated debate on the root causes of trafficking and a discussion on enlarging labour migration possibilities.

FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR) Learning Workshop, Chiang Mai, Thailand, 24-29 May 2009

In 1999 and 2000 GAATW led Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR) workshops with several researchers. Ten years later, with much member involvement, we are using the methodology again to look at connections between gender, migration, labour and trafficking in the lives of women. Thirteen groups and the GAATW-IS participated in a Learning Workshop that took place last week in Chiang Mai, Thailand to prepare for this research activity: FIDA Kenya, SWAN Vancouver, CEAPA, Modemu, Colectivo Leila Diniz, Sodireitos, La Strada International/RESPECT, La Strada Moldova, AkiDwA, SanaYarThi Pann, ATKI-HK, Shakti Samuha and LRC-KJHAM.

The 2007 GAATW Collateral Damage report showed us the need for more evidence-based research and advocacy. The FPAR methodology will help bring forward women’s lived experiences, support women to take power over the knowledge that comes out of research, and influence how that knowledge is used for action and advocacy that is relevant for them. At the Learning Workshop we discussed the definition of feminism that will drive the research and learned methodology skills from each other. Though each group’s research will be different, common themes and goals were agreed upon.

The GAATW objectives of the FPAR are:

- To deepen understanding of the factors that impact on women’s realities and rights
- To promote local action to realise women’s rights
- To encourage evidence-based advocacy at all levels

The results of the research will be discussed in February and will be part of the International Member’s Congress mid-2010. For more information, please contact Xenia Commandeur xenia@gaatw.org or Rebecca Napier-Moore rebecca@gaatw.org.

III GAATW REDLAC Meeting: Regional Consultation
4-7 May 2009 Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

GAATW, in partnership with Projeto Trama, organized a consultation with GAATW members and allies from Latin America and the Caribbean (along with one member from Europe - FIZ) to exchanges experiences, discuss current trends in trafficking and migration in the region, strengthen the GAATW REDLAC regional chapter, and develop plans for future regional activities (including building upon the REDLAC action plan developed in 2008).

The four-day event included discussion on our work, the human rights approach to trafficking, and linkages between trafficking, migration, gender and labour. There were also workshops on Access to Justice and Recognise Rights, which led to some concrete plans for GAATW-REDLAC in the coming year(s). It was wonderful to see familiar and new faces, GAATW-IS shares our heartfelt thanks for the commitment and continued energy shared by everyone throughout the event!

A Roundtable on CEDAW and Trafficking, 5-9 May 2009
GAATW collaborated with the International Women’s Rights Action Watch-Asia Pacific (IWRAW-AP) and the Coordination of Action and Research on Aids and Mobility (CARAM) Asia to organize a Roundtable on Using the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) to Protect the Rights of Women Migrant Workers and Trafficked Women in South and Southeast Asia. This Roundtable discussed migration and trafficking in South and Southeast Asia in the context of migration for work, with a specific focus on the promotion and protection of the human rights of women through CEDAW. GAATW Member Organizations Transient Workers Count Too (TWC2), National Domestic Workers Movement (NDWM), Legal Services for Children and Women (LSCW), the Alliance Against Trafficking in Women and Children Nepal (AATWIN) and Shakti Samuha attended. Discussions looked at the tensions within and between women’s rights, migrants rights and trafficked persons rights movements and organizations and all participants worked together to broaden their understanding of different legal tools including CEDAW. We hope to continue to work with many of the organizations present to maximize our use of CEDAW as an advocacy tool and means of protecting the rights of women migrant workers in the future.

Trafficking in persons: ten years after the institution of the ad hoc inter-governmental committee for the elaboration of the Palermo protocol conference 21-22 May 2009
Organised by IOM and supported by the university of Palermo and UNICRI, the conference aimed to bring together some of the individuals who participated in the 1999-2000 negotiations for the elaboration of the Convention on Transnational Organised Crime (UNTOC) and its attached Protocols (including the UN Trafficking Protocol). The conference brought together practitioners, academics, and representatives from international and national organisations and governments, to ascertain the current status of Protocol ratification, discuss the successes and challenges of the implementation process, and look at the results of implementing the anti-trafficking protocol. Participants also reflected on what has worked and what has not worked in the past decade. There was some degree of self-criticism and self-reflection, as well as satisfaction for the achievements so far. For more information, please contact Nerea Bilbatua: nerea@gaatw.org

Women, Immigration and Prostitution: Keys to understand the reality, 29-30 April
The two-day conference was organised by a research group belonging to the university of Barcelona and SICAR CAT, an NGO providing assistance to trafficked women in the Catalonia region (Spain). The conference aimed to analyze intersections and differences between women, migration and prostitution and look at practical examples of organizations working on these issues. Participants were mainly students and members of Catalan NGOs, Red Cross, the city hall, and the police. Nerea from the GAATW-IS participated in one panel called: “Networks and Strategies of joint work with trafficked women”, which presented networking experiences at local (Catalonia), inter-regional (Spain and Brazil) and regional (European) levels and helped broaden the discussions to look at trafficking and its linkages with migration, labour and gender in a more systematic way.

OSCE Special Representative for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings calls on States to combat exploitation in the agricultural sector

In a statement prepared for a technical seminar on trafficking for labour exploitation into the agricultural sector, OSCE Special Representative Eva Biaudet referred to the need to improve identification and services for people trafficked into this sector and stated that: “The political framework exists; now we need political will and action at the national level. More efficient police investigations and prosecutions are needed but will not be enough. Governments have to become more active in protecting agricultural workers and enforcing their rights. In most countries labour inspections are very limited or nonexistent in the agricultural sector.”

Application Deadline - formal Civil Society involvement in the GFMD 2009

The deadline for submission of applications to attend the formal Civil Society Days of the Global Forum on Migration and Development in November has been extended until 8 June. The draft agenda of the CSD Conference is also now available at the GFMD site. Unlike GFMD 2008, there will be no interaction with governments during the formal civil society conference; however, we encourage members to apply and to take the opportunity to engage with this process as very little space is given to migrants, migrant rights groups, human rights groups and other civil society organisations to speak out during GFMD. For more information and to find the application form, go to: http://www.gfmd2009.org/ Email your applications by 8 June to: info@gfmd2009.org

Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from the GAATW International Secretariat

The months have passed swiftly, and we are now at the end of the first half of the year. Some of GAATW’s activities lined up for the coming months include: the release of the next Alliance News focusing on the Latin America and the Caribbean region; the Asia Regional Consultation in Nepal; the launch of GAATW’s urgent action calling for a review mechanism which we hope GAATW members can actively take part in; and the preparatory work for the next International Members Congress in 2010. As always we count on your participation and advice.

In this month’s issue, we highlight Italy’s proposed bill to criminalise undocumented migrants and endorse community vigilante groups; we are extremely critical of this legislation that will have serious, and possibly dangerous, implications to foreign migrant workers conditions. We urge legislators and policy makers to avoid similar ‘bad practices’ and to centre their efforts in creating more economic opportunities for people and ensuring that the human rights of all people, regardless of their migration status, are not being overlooked.

We are pleased to share more news from GAATW members: Girls Power Initiative in Nigeria, La Strada Belarus and Poland, and the Sex Workers Project at the Urban Justice Center in the USA. We also highlight an upcoming regional event, co-organised by Nelia Sancho as part of AWHRC (Nelia works at the Buhay Foundation, a GAATW member), the Southeast Asia Court of Women on HIV, Human Trafficking and Migration. We have also included many recent resources that are accessible online.

We also take this opportunity to invite you to join our latest petition, ‘Stop, Look and Listen’ urging governments to create a review mechanism for the UNTOC Human Trafficking Protocol in 2010. More information on updates from the secretariat.

Warmly,
The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

Reject Anti-Migrant Bill

ITALY: Human Rights Watch urges the Senate to reject legislative proposals that would impose criminal penalties on undocumented migrants. The bill (known as the “security package”) will be voted on by the senate in late June.

The passing of the law would increase detention period to up to six months and allow for fines of up to €10,000 for entering and remaining in Italy without a permit. Doctors’ unions and rights groups have expressed concern that the measure could compel public health and education officials to report undocumented migrants seeking medical care and other services. It would also include a ‘dangerous’ provision for a national framework for “citizens' groups” to patrol the streets to help law-enforcement authorities to combat crime. The groups would not be armed or have arrest powers, but preference for membership would go to retired police and military personnel.

“Legalizing vigilante groups at a time of rising intolerance is a recipe for disaster,” said Judith Sunderland, senior Western Europe researcher at Human Rights Watch. "If these groups use violence against migrants, the state will be directly responsible.”

The government recently began to forcibly return boats carrying migrants in international waters back to Libya, without determining whether they needed protection from persecution or abuse, a clear violation of international refugee law. (See related article here)

ILO adopts “Global Jobs Pact” aimed at creating jobs, and protecting workers

GENEVA: The International Labour Organization (ILO) adopted a Global Jobs Pact designed to guide national and international policies aimed at stimulating economic recovery, generating jobs and providing protection to working people and their families. The Pact was adopted following the three-day ILO Global Jobs Summit which tackled a recent ILO report showing unprecedented increase in unemployment globally and a persistence of very high levels of poverty.

According to the ILO, the Pact amounts to the most urgent and wide-ranging response to an economic crisis ever adopted by the ILO. It calls on governments and organizations representing workers and employers to work together to collectively tackle the global jobs crisis with policies in line with the ILO’s Decent Work Agenda. Decent work includes employment opportunity and income; rights, voice and recognition; family stability and personal development; and fairness and gender equality.

Compulsory day off for domestic workers

KUALA LUMPUR: The Malaysian Government has agreed to make it compulsory for employers to give one day off a week for their migrant domestic workers. The Ministry of Human Resources will make it mandatory for all domestic helpers to sign a contract of employment containing provisions like salary, the name of employers, their workplaces and the compulsory one day off a week. This provision would be incorporated into the contract of employment to be signed by employers, migrant domestic workers and the agencies responsible for bringing domestic workers into Malaysia for work. A guide book will be provided to migrant domestic workers containing the contact numbers of embassies and relevant agencies. The Labour Department will also be making visits to migrant domestic workers to check their welfare and to make sure that the terms stated in their contract are being followed.

South Africa introduces new permit for Zimbabwean migrants; not child migrants

SOUTH AFRICA: South Africa has recently introduced a new permit system allowing adult Zimbabwean migrants to stay in the country for 90 days to work and study. While the permit has been applauded as a positive step towards effectively “managing” Zimbabwean migrants, child rights NGOs are concerned about the effect it will have on independent child migrants from Zimbabwe who are not included in the permit system. Child rights activists in South Africa admit that the challenge for the government is the fact that giving the child migrants permits would be equivalent to condoning child labour. On the other hand, they fear that the new permit system makes the child migrants more vulnerable as they are competing for work with people who are now recognised as legal migrants.

Legal Update

Sri Lanka to reform migrant worker sponsorship laws
SRI LANKA: Sri Lanka is seeking assistance from Middle Eastern nations to reform migrant worker sponsorship laws that currently require migrant workers to get the consent of their employer to change sponsors or to exit the country of employment. The Sri Lanka Bureau of Foreign Employment (SLBFE) said that the Government of Bahrain had responded positively to these proposed changes, and as a result, the proposed new laws would come into effect from 1 August 2009 in Bahrain. According to the amended rules, workers would be able to change employers without losing legal status in the country of employment.

Child-trafficking bill closer to becoming law
CANADA: A private member’s bill introduced by Winnipeg Conservative MP Joy Smith will head back to the House of Commons for its third and final reading. The pending legislation imposes a minimum sentence of five years for anyone convicted of human trafficking when the victim is under the age of 18. After third reading, the bill has to pass the Senate before it can be given Royal Assent and become law.

UN Special Rapporteur on Trafficking: visit and recommendations to Poland & Belarus Between 24–29 May, Ms Joy Ngozi Ezeilo, the UN Special Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons, made a country visit to the La Strada member countries Poland and Belarus. In her preliminary findings and recommendations to Poland, Ms Ngozi Ezeilo positively notes the government’s cooperation with stakeholders and countries as well as necessary legal amendments. However, she also voiced concerns about the lack of a comprehensive and unambiguous definition of trafficking in the Polish criminal law, a lack of capacity for labour inspectors to gain an effective oversight of trafficking in sectors other than the sex industry, unduly long judicial proceedings relating to trafficking cases, limited availability and access to social assistance by victims of trafficking especially in rural areas, and a failure to pay victims of trafficking compensation, among others.

Anti-trafficking Advocates Call for Swift Action on Bill in the Senate
The New York State Assembly has passed a bill enabling victims of human trafficking to wipe away prostitution convictions resulting from coerced involvement in sex work. The bill has broad support in the Assembly and with anti-trafficking service providers and advocates. The Sex Workers Project at the Urban Justice Center (SWP) says it is one of several bills whose passage is critical to promoting and protecting the rights of individuals involved in the sex industries, whether by choice, circumstance, or coercion. Supporters hope that the bill will be passed before the end of the current legislative session.

Stop, Look, Listen - what is really being done to stop human trafficking?
GAATW-IS has launched an online petition to call on governments who have signed or ratified the Palermo Protocol to urgently support creating a review mechanism for the UNTOC Human Trafficking Protocol to ensure that all governments reviews their current efforts in combating human trafficking. GAATW and other human rights defenders world-wide are concerned on how anti-trafficking measures are leading to further violations. We need to ask our governments to ensure that rights of people migrating, or returning to their home countries, are better protected by anti-trafficking policies.

GAATW has launched an urgent action calling for a review mechanism, which will include collecting signatures to present to the governments during the fourth conference of states parties to the UN Convention Against Transnational Organised Crime and its Protocols (including the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress, and Punish Trafficking in Persons) in October 2010.

The guide aims to raise awareness of the most pressing matters facing female labour migrants, to introduce gender-sensitivity in contemporary labour migration policies, and to provide policy makers with a practical tool to consult when developing and implementing policies. Dear Members and Friends,

Welcome to the July e-Bulletin. In this issue we highlight a wide range of positive steps taken by governments around the world to improve the recognition and protection of human rights - establishment of a new human rights body in Southeast Asia, an opportunity for undocumented workers to become regularized in Belgium, and a step towards non-conditional assistance in Australian anti-trafficking policy.

In regards to GAATW work, we are featuring updates from two GAATW members' activities in Africa and Asia, as well as GAATW’s recent meeting with the High Commissioner for Human Rights in Geneva.

Finally, we want to take this opportunity to express our solidarity with the organisers of the upcoming South East Asia Court of Women on HIV and Human Trafficking, which will be held in Bali, Indonesia in early August. GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

ASEAN's new human rights body: A threat to human rights in the region?
On 20 July 2009, Foreign Ministers of the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) met in Phuket, Thailand and during this meeting adopted the Terms of Reference (ToR) for a new ASEAN Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights (AICHR).

A number of civil society organisations have greeted the decision with cautious optimism, suggesting that it represents a first positive step towards human rights protection. But concerns have also been raised in that the AICHR has a weak mandate, does not have a formal mechanism for individual complaints, provides the Commission with only consultative status rather than any binding power, and lacks a clear protection mandate for AICHR. ASEAN's new instrument rests on the assumption that member states can reach consensus on human rights and that they are committed to providing human rights protection - “Seeking consensus with Myanmar’s Generals on human rights, the logical consequence means that the enjoyment of human rights across the region is now under real threat,” says the Asian Centre for Human Belgium to legalise 25,000
Belgian Prime Minister Herman Van Rompuy released details of the federal government's agreement on regularising irregular migrants. Under the new initiative, irregular migrants who have lived in Belgium for at least five years will be able to apply to regularise their immigration status between 15 September and 15 December, 2009. Authorities have imposed strict criteria for foreigners to eligible, for example, applicants will have to prove that they are integrated into Belgian society. If successful, they will be granted papers allowing them to legally stay and work in the country.
People who have been working in Belgium for at least two-and-a-half years can also apply for a residence permit. They have to produce a labour contract and a regional labour card.

Legislative Update
New measures to protect trafficked persons
Last month, the Australian government has announced significant changes to its anti-trafficking policy in regards to protecting victims of human trafficking. These changes include improving access to assistance, for example, trafficked persons are no longer required to cooperate with police in order to apply for an Australian visa to allow them to stay in the country. However, the system retains its criminal justice visa for those who are assisting police.

Saudi sets tough new penalties for human trafficking
Saudi Arabia signed a new law that increases penalties against convicted human traffickers of up to 15 years in prison and a one million riyal ($266,666) fine. The Saudi government’s definition of human trafficking includes holding a person under control for sexual abuse, forced labour, involuntary begging, slavery or slavery-like practices, and enforced organ removal or medical experimentation. However, critics argued that the definition does not define the trafficking of children.

Labour rights training in Nairobi with FIDA Kenya
GAATW member FIDA Kenya led a training workshop from 15-17 July, 2009 for 21 informal sector workers in Nairobi. The training was organised following some research by GAATW IS staff, Nkirote Laiboni, in which the women were interviewed and expressed concern about labour violations, as well as high corruption and harassment from police and city council at their work places. The women expressed a need to know more about their labour rights.

FIDA Kenya’s training on labour rights and employment laws included speakers such as FIDA’s litigation officer, representatives from the Kenyan National Human Rights Commission, and a trade union umbrella group. GAATW IS staff Nkirote Laiboni, Bandana Pattanaik and Rebecca Napier-Moore also participated in the training.

At the end of the workshop, the women decided to organize themselves, forming a group in each community, as ways to improve their bargaining power. The women will also take part in GAATW’s Feminist Participatory Action Research (FPAR) that FIDA is carrying out. For more information, please contact Nkirote Laiboni: nkirote@gaatw.org civil society organisations urged Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono to instruct the Department of Manpower and Transmigration to ratify the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (1990). At the same time, Komnas Perempuan (National Commission on Women Right of Indonesia) urged the Indonesian President and Legislative to implement the ratification before October 2009 and encourage civil society to give their concern on this issue related to Indonesia President election.

At least six million Indonesians work as migrant workers in the Middle East, Hong Kong-SAR, Taiwan, Singapore, Malaysia and Brunei. More than 80 percent of these workers are women. Indonesia has an Act of Republic Indonesia No. 39, 2004 concerning the placement and protection of Indonesian overseas workers, but this Act focuses on the administrative regulation of migration rather than the protection of Migrant Worker’s rights. The ratification of the International Migrant’s Convention will force the Indonesian state to review all policy on migrant workers and implement policies that protect Migrant Workers human rights. FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Dr. Nivedita Prasad from Ban-Ying, a GAATW member based in Germany, and Caroline Hames from GAATW-IS met with the High Commissioner for Human Rights, Ms. Navanethem Pillay, in Geneva. It was an opportunity for GAATW to discuss the Alliance’s advocacy goals and outcomes and to note the importance of the Review Mechanism. The meeting addressed the centrality of a human rights approach to anti-trafficking measures and commented on the lack of adequate efforts to include essential rights such as right to compensation and redress, right to health, etc. to trafficked and migrant persons. GAATW encouraged the High Commissioner to emphasise the importance of the Recommended Principles and Guidelines in high level dialogue with the UNODC as the review mechanism is being established. And added that if the Recommended Principles and Guidelines were used in the way they were intended, as a checklist and practical guidance in drafting and implementing legislation on trafficking - then many of the cases of ‘collateral damage’ could be avoided.

OHCHR Coordination Workshop between the Special Rapporteur on Sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography (Najat M’Jid Maala); the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking, especially women and children (Joy Ngozi Ezeilo); and the Special Rapporteur on Contemporary forms of Slavery (Gulnara Shahinian)

The coordination workshop, held from 24-26 June in Geneva, Switzerland, consisted of closed sessions among the three Special Rapporteurs and open plenary sessions that also included UN agencies and NGOs. The main objectives were to map out the areas and scope of work of each mandate; identify commonalities and areas of duplication amongst the three mandates; improve/tailor methods of work amongst the three mandates; and develop practical tools to collaborate with partners: UN agencies, NGOs, civil society organizations, treaty bodies, and national human rights institutions.

GAATW attended this workshop and recommended the SR on Trafficking to look at the human rights impact of crime control approaches to trafficking, including practices such as conditional assistance; to the SR on Slavery to focus on ‘new’ forced labour practices that are adding to old bonded labour or slave labour practices or in some cases emerging as a result of the country's development initiatives; to the SR on Children to look at young adults as a specific sub-group among children.

The Centre for Asia Pacific Social Transformation Studies (CAPTRANS) at the University of Wollongong will hold a workshop titled Labour Migration and Trafficking: Policy Making at the Border in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia from 1 -3 August 2009. The aim is for workshop participants to explore if, and how, the trafficking framework has influenced flows of migrants across borders; how policy makers in sending and receiving countries attempt to regulate labour migration; and to what extent migration strategies and anti-trafficking policies have influenced the ability of migrant workers to exercise their labour rights. GAATW IS staff, Rebecca Napier-Moore will participate as a speaker in the policy forum to be organised on the final day of the program.

The United Nations Development Program (UNDP) released the 2009 Arab Human Development Report (ADHR) assessing the security situation in the Arab world. The UNDP-sponsored report, authored by some 90 intellectuals and scholars from several Arab countries, was released this month after two years of research. The report called on Arab governments to change laws and social mores that discriminate against women. The report also touched on the multi-billion dollar human trafficking industry that implicates Arab states with varying levels of complicity in the process. Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat.

It has been a fruitful and busy month for us in the Secretariat as we draw closer to the GAATW Asia Regional Consultation (ARC) scheduled on August 31-September 4 in Kathmandu, Nepal. The GAATW Secretariat team hopes that this space will spur more discussions and collaborations within the Alliance on common issues. We will bring you the highlights of the ARC meeting in our next e-bulletin.

We would like to announce that the Third International Members’ Congress (IMC) of GAATW will be held mid-2010. All members are invited to participate in this important meeting. The IS is proposing to hold it in the first week of July 2010. We request our members to let us know if this proposed timeline works for them. More on the upcoming IMC 2010 will follow soon.

For this issue, we are highlighting the UN High Commissioner’s article on the impact of the economic crisis on women migrant workers’ rights; the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking’s call for NAPTIP’s support in combating trafficking in Nigeria; Turkey’s decision to lift its geographical limitations in the Refugee Convention; and IACHR’s visit to immigration detention centres in the US. We also bring you more legislative developments in supporting Indian migrant workers in distress and a new passed law in the Philippines that will hopefully strengthen the delivery of services to women migrant workers.

We also share with you some of the highlights from the recent meetings that the IS staff and one GAATW Board Member attended this month. These include the Asia Pacific Forum meeting in Jordan, which was a good opportunity to strengthen our network in the Middle Eastern region. Also, we bring you a long list of relevant references that you might find useful in your work.

Warmly,

The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights has highlighted that the global economic crisis will have a disproportionate impact upon women as the majority of them are poor and disenfranchised. Women migrant workers face additional threats of marginalization, jobs losses and deprivation of their economic and social rights due to the global financial turmoil. High Commissioner Navanethem Pillay stated that many industries do not provide women with equal pay for equal work and they lack legal protection. At the 53rd session of the Commission on the Status of Women, Deputy Secretary-General Asha-Rose Migiro stated that migrant women working in the domestic realm often fall outside the scope of labour laws and urged governments to use national legal systems to eliminate discrimination, promote equality and stop violence against women. Too many perpetrators are not held accountable she stated, and as a result impunity persists. The Secretary-General’s study from 2006 found that many governments have yet to adopt legislation that criminalizes all forms of violence against women or on human trafficking.

Human Trafficking: SR on Trafficking Enlists NAPTIP’s Support, Others
The Special Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons, Mrs. Joy Ngozi Ezeilo, has called for teamwork in the fight against what she termed ‘modern day slavery’ amongst the Ministry of Interior, NAPTIP, NGOs and the media at the grassroots level. Ezeilo pointed out that Nigeria was a destination and a major source country as far as trafficking in persons is concerned. She also outlined the new trends of trafficking to include organ trafficking, such as the sale of kidneys and eyes, by victims of unfavourable conditions to traffickers who latter resell these parts for higher prices. Another type of trafficking, according to her, has to do with sports, where local footballers are tricked to neighbouring countries as supposed high priced stars, but are forced into exploitative practices.

Turkey to Lift Limitations for Asylum Seekers
In the wake of increasing calls from the United Nations and the European Union, Turkey has decided to lift geographical limitations to its Refugee Convention. Turkey received strong criticism for its asylum procedure in reports prepared on the occasion of June 20, World Refugee Day, which prompted Turkish authorities to revise the country's asylum procedure. The Turkish government has prepared an action plan and submitted it to the EU which foresees revision of the status of refugees.
The government plans to put this plan into action by 2010, and the last phase of this plan foresees the elimination of geographical limitations by the year 2012. In line with its action plan, the country needs to sign readmission agreements with its 24 neighbouring countries. Turkey has not been able to conclude talks but is currently continuing talks to some of these countries.

IACHR Visit to US Immigration Detention Facilities
The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights completed a week of visits to various U.S. immigration detention facilities in Arizona and Texas. The aim was to gather information from detention officials, detainees and civil society organizations regarding immigration enforcement, detention, and due process issues in the United States. The IACHR Rapporteurship concludes that, despite some positive recent adjustments to the immigration detention system in the U.S., many men, women and children detained in those facilities are held in unacceptable conditions, and the right of these persons to due process remains, in many cases, compromised. The Rapporteurship identified a number of significant concerns regarding U.S. immigration policies and practices involving enforcement, detention, and due process.

Magna Carta of Women Signed
 Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo recently signed the Republic Act 9710, a law banning discrimination against women, and recognizing and protecting their rights. It also mandates the Department of Labour and Employment and the Department of Social Welfare and Development to strengthen the delivery of services to women migrant workers abroad and to ensure the protection and promotion of migrant women’s rights and welfare, regardless of work status, and protect them against discrimination in wages, conditions of work and employment opportunities.

GAATW IS Staff Participate in APF Conference in Amman, Jordan
This month, GAATW IS staff Nkirote Laiboni and Caroline Hames attended the 14th Asia Pacific Forum (APF) conference in Amman, Jordan. At a parallel meeting of non-governmental organisations from the Asia-Pacific region that was held prior to the Annual Conference, GAATW IS Staff had the opportunity to make presentations and facilitate discussions on the role of NHRI in addressing migration and human trafficking. It was also an opportunity to present findings of a recently concluded research on steps taken by NHRI in the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) sub-region to evaluate and monitor State anti-trafficking responses. For more information on the 14th APF Annual Meeting please go to their website:
http://www.asiapacificforum.net/about/annual-meetings/14th-jordan-2009

While in Jordan, GAATW IS staff also visited and met with a number of organisations in a bid to learn more about migration and human trafficking trends in Jordan and the rest of the Middle East region. These meetings established that migration, more so of women, is occurring on a large scale in the Middle East. As concerns migration flows into Jordan, migration mainly occurs from South and South East Asia and North Africa, and to a lesser extent, from neighbouring countries. Migrant workers in Jordan and other countries in the region suffer various forms of human rights violations ranging from long working hours, to withdrawal or refusal to pay salaries, poor and unsanitary living and working conditions, withholding of workers’ passports and legal documents by employers and recruitment agencies, and physical and verbal abuse. For more information, please contact Nkirote Lahoni at:

GAATW Board Member Vicky Nwogu Participates in Workshop to Review the Sierra Leone Anti-Trafficking Act
GAATW Board Member Vicky Nwogu recently attended a workshop for review and amendment of the Sierra Leone Anti-trafficking Act, 2005. Organised by World Hope International-Sierra Leone and the Sierra Leone Gender Ministry, the workshop brought together representatives from government and civil society organisations with the objective of reviewing the law in order to better protect victims and vulnerable groups, and to reduce some administrative and bureaucratic bottlenecks in the current enforcement mechanism. The recommendations made during the workshop are geared towards ascertaining that Parliament takes a second look at the Act. A smaller technical group will meet again to distil the workshop outcomes into more concrete amendments to the law and subsequently present these to Parliament. For more information on this, please contact Nkirote at:

The first ever South East Asia Court of Women on HIV and Human Trafficking: from Vulnerability to Free, Just and Safe Movement was held in Bali, Indonesia on 6 August 2009. The court brought together for more than 500 participants including UN staff, ministers, government officials, academics, NGOs, and communities that are working towards empowering women and reducing their vulnerability to trafficking and HIV. Also in attendance were women with direct experience on issues under discussion including HIV positive women, trafficked women, sex workers, domestic and factory workers, and migrant women, all coming from various countries including Indonesia, Philippines, Singapore, Cambodia, Thailand, Myanmar and Burmese women from the Thai-Burma border.

The main purpose of the court was to give women an opportunity to be heard by giving them space to share their testimonies with a broader audience encompassing leaders and decision makers.
Aatcharaporn Chaowahem, GAATW’s Asia Regional Program Officer, was invited to be an expert witness during the “Recognising the rights of vulnerable communities, including migrants, domestic workers, sex workers and people living with HIV” session, and to present a statement and speak on the rights of various groups including survivors of trafficking and people living with HIV/AIDS in the South-East Asia region. Vichuta LY from Legal Support for Children and Women (LSCW) and Eni Adi from Association of Indonesian Migrant Workers in Hong Kong (ATKI-HK) were there as expert witness while Vathany from Cambodian Women’s Crisis Center (CWCC) also attended the conference.

Preliminary Findings on Study about Migrant Workers in the UK Sex Industry
The Economic and Social Research Council has released its preliminary findings on a study it is undertaking to explore the link between migration and the sex industry in the UK. The majority of migrant sex workers interviewed during the research were not forced or trafficked. According to the report, immigration status is the most important factor restricting the ability of migrant sex workers to exercise their rights in their professional and private lives. Working in the sex industry is often a way for those interviewed to avoid the un.rewarding and sometimes exploitative conditions they meet in non-sexual jobs. By working in the sex industry, many interviewees are able to maintain dignified living standards in the UK while dramatically improving the living conditions of their families in the Caribbean Counter-Trafficking Model Legislation and Explanatory Guidelines: A Booklet

IOM’s Caribbean Counter-Trafficking Model Legislation and Explanatory Guidelines is a resource for stakeholders in government and civil society wishing to improve domestic legislation and policy to address the crime of trafficking in persons in the Caribbean. This booklet has two parts: Part 1, the model legislation which upholds the UN Anti-Trafficking Protocol’s standards and incorporates the local and regional contexts, and Part 2, the explanatory guidelines summarizing the group’s discussions, with easy-to-read textboxes and “best practices” to facilitate implementation. Part 2 also provides a counter-trafficking legal framework by suggesting provisions and sentencing guidelines. http://www.iom.int/jahia/Jahia/cache/offonce/pid/1674;jsessionid=2FF7A5CF8A34CBDEA8957CD306865C84.worker02?entryId=21426

The OSCE Office of the Special Representative and Co-ordinator for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings has launched the 3rd Occasional Paper: A Summary of Challenges Addressing Human Trafficking for Labour Exploitation in the Agricultural Sector in the OSCE Region (OSCE)
The third Occasional Paper focuses on the second largest employment sector of the OSCE region. It is a thorough analysis of the current challenges within the agricultural sector, aiming to assist in identification of the structural issues and deficits of this sector that cause or exacerbates a worker’s vulnerability. The paper also addresses human trafficking for labour exploitation in the agricultural sector throughout the OSCE region. It sheds light on a sector in which workers are commonly exploited, but are often out of sight. http://www.osce.org/cthbnb/item_11_38709.html

A user-friendly Guide to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families (ICRMW) is now available. Seeking to better protect migrants’ human rights and dignity, the new publication seeks to inform and persuade governments worldwide to sign and ratify the Convention, and to implement it at the national level. The guide provides a summary of Convention and discusses the process of ratification, outlines the pros and cons of ratification and refutes various misconceptions about the Convention. To date, 41 countries have ratified the ICRMW, far short of the 120 or more countries worldwide for which migration is an important feature, either as origin, transit or destination countries. http://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/GuideonStrengtheningofMigrantsrights.aspx

A recent publication by the Council of Europe, ‘Racism towards migrants in Europe’ analyses migration policies which may have an influence on this increased hostility towards migrants at a time when the issue of migration is at the heart of many States’ concerns. The author, Djacoba Liva Tehindrazanarivelo, denounces discourses and policies which directly or indirectly stigmatise migrants and examines legal rules for protection of migrants against racism and discrimination at global, regional and national levels. One section discusses the denial of fundamental rights of undocumented migrants. The author also identifies protective measures taken by states at the legal, criminal, administrative and political levels. (Source: ENAR Weekly Mail n° 184, 15 May 2009).

Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat. September has been a notable month as GAATW concluded its fourth regional consultation with Asia members and friends in the region. We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who participated in the Asia Regional Consultation (ARC) and we hope that you continue the dialogue in promoting the rights of trafficked and migrant women in your work. Highlights of the consultation are mentioned in Updates from the Secretariat.

In this month’s global highlights we would like to share with you news reports on the closure of migrant camps in Calais and its possible impact on the human rights of migrants. Migrant rights activists denounce the maltreatment of migrants and call for the freedom of movement for all. We also bring you updates from the 12th Session of the Human Rights Council focusing on the report by the SR on Contemporary Forms of Slavery on forced labour and the ISHR report on the right of migrants in detention centers. More updates on the New Zealand government’s initiative to prevent human trafficking and a new immigration system to the United Kingdom, ‘earned citizenship’, which is currently undergoing consultation.

We also feature the latest events and activities from GAATW members in Europe and Latin America. We are calling members and friends to respond to the announcements below, particularly on the upcoming GFMD in November and the call to solicit views on the OHCHR Recommended Principles and Guidelines.

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

‘Jungle’ of Calais closed
Calais’ unofficial refugee camp ‘The Jungle’ was closed by French immigration minister, Eric Besson, on September 22nd. He claimed the closure was a bid to prevent people trafficking. The camp has replaced official centres like Sangatte, acting as a gathering point for migrants hoping to cross to Britain.
High Commissioner for Refugees Antonio Guterres called on all European countries to work more effectively together to standardise their asylum policies. “The problem is that we have freedom of movement among European countries, but we have different asylum systems with different rates of recognition,” he said. “You might be easily recognised as a refugee in one of the European countries and not so easily in another.”
http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/europe/8262283.stm
Migrant rights’ organisations are trying to learn more about what has happened to the migrants following the camp’s closure. The organisations are concerned for the migrants’ health and wellbeing and fear they may be vulnerable to criminal networks.

At the 12th Session of the Human Rights Council the Special Rapporteur on "Contemporary forms of Slavery, It’s Causes and Consequences", Ms Gulnara Shahinian delivered her first thematic report: The Promotion and Protection of all Human Rights, Civil, Political, Economic, Social and Cultural Rights Including the Right to Development. In this report, she explored the issue of forced labour in more detail. As mentioned in her initial report, she has again focused on bonded labour as a pre- eminent example of forced labour.

The Special Rapporteur found that where laws on forced labour exist, their enforcement is limited and that in general there are very few policies and programmes that address bonded labour. In her conclusions she recommends that Governments, non-governmental organizations, United Nations agencies and private actors take specific prevention, prosecution and protection measures to combat forced and bonded labour.

National Commission on Violence against Women and Human Rights Groups Urged Indonesian Government to undertake a Judicial Review of the Bill Sanctioning the Stoning to Death of Adulterers in Aceh
On 14 September 2009, Indonesia's Central Government and Aceh's Regional Parliament adopted new bill Qanun Jinayat. The move to legalise qanun (local regulation) and jinayat (actions which are prohibited by Islamic law) sanctions the stoning to death of adulterers and the caning of homosexuals, rejecting objections from NAD Local Government and human rights groups. Human rights groups argue that the legalization of qanun proves that the government has failed to carry out its obligation to prohibit local policies which are incompatible with the national regulation and Constitution 1945. Caning and stoning to death are cruel, inhuman punishments which humiliate and violate human dignity, breaching the constitutional guarantee as declared in Article 28 I (1) of the Constitution 1945. New Zealand develops plan of action to address trafficking
To meet its international obligations and commitments under the United Nations Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, especially Women and Children, New Zealand has developed the “Plan of Action to Prevent People Trafficking”. The main focus of the Plan will be on prevention as New Zealand does not have any known cases of human trafficking. It aims to protect the human rights of any identified victims of trafficking and to prosecute any offenders to the full extent of the law.

Consultation on Earned Citizenship in the United Kingdom
After several reforms to the immigration system, the UK government is introducing the principle of earned citizenship, aimed to manage the numbers allowed to settle permanently in the United Kingdom. Provisions on earned citizenship form part of the Borders, Citizenship and Immigration Act 2009, which became law on 21 July 2009. The provisions of the Act are planned to be implemented in July 2011. It entails a three phase process, including a stage of ‘probationary citizenship’ and language requirements. The UK Border Agency has opened an online consultation in which anyone can comment on the introduction of a new points test for earned citizenship. The consultation is asking for views on issues including the role of local authorities in the earned citizenship process, whether to test would-be citizens' knowledge of United Kingdom history and politics, and measures to reduce the 'brain drain' from developing countries to the United Kingdom. The consultation is open until 26 October 2009.

BELINN’s Leaflet on “Communicating with Nigerian Victims of Human Trafficking”
Bonded Labour in the Netherlands (BLinN) is in the middle of a 3 year project, Omgekeerde Ontwikkelingssamenwerking (‘Reversed Development Cooperation’). Over the course of the 3 years 3 countries are researched. The overall aim is that people working with victims of trafficking in the Netherlands learn from the experiences and knowledge of organisations in the countries of origin. The first stage of this project focuses on Nigeria, from which a leaflet for social workers providing advice as to how to communicate with Nigerian victims was produced. The Red Cross Netherlands translated it into English and presented it to their International Federation as a good example of cooperation between organisations ‘here and there’. Although the leaflet centres on the situation in Holland it is still useful for members and friends of GAATW as an example of the possible fruits of cooperation. FROM THE SECRETARIAT
GAATW Asia Regional Consultation (ARC)
31 August-4 September 2009 Kathmandu, Nepal
GAATW organized its final regional consultation with member organisations and allies in Asia. The five-day consultation started with the socio-political situation in a number of countries in Asia and its impact on women’s human rights with specific reference to trafficking, migration and labour. This was followed by two interactive discussions on the rights of domestic workers and another session on the impact of anti-trafficking legislation on the rights of sex workers. Day three and four focused on thematic workshops:

- Workshop on Advocacy
  The workshop began with discussions on national advocacy including for migrant women’s rights to minimum standards for services for trafficked persons and to end violence against women. Highlights include the discussions on: ASEAN and how different ASEAN bodies could be used to advocate for migrant women and trafficked persons’ rights; and the SAARC Convention on Combating the Crime of Trafficking in Women and Children for Prostitution and some critique of its narrow definition of trafficking and discussion of alternative SAARC advocacy avenues such as the SAARC Social Charter. Two workshops took place, one on the Universal Periodic Review and Human Rights mechanisms which offer useful advocacy opportunities and the other on working with the media for advocacy. Participants also engaged in a discussion on international advocacy looking at the UNTOC review mechanism discussions and ‘STOP, LOOK, LISTEN’ as well as the US Government Trafficking in Persons annual report.

- Workshop on Linking Migration, Gender, Labour and Trafficking
  The Linkages workshop looked at how trafficking, migration, labour and gender are closely connected, but also warned about conflating the terms. Ms. Jyoti Sanghera from the GAATW board, IS staff member Rebecca Napier-Moore and Bandana Pattanaik, Mr. Samar Thapa of trade union GEFONT, and Dr. Renu Rajbhandari of WOREC gave presentations on their respective topics.

- Workshop on Psycho-Social Care
  This workshop aimed to explore the importance of caring for the self, and what caretakers need in order to sustain themselves whilst caring for the traumatized and others in need. The workshop started with a dance movement therapy session, facilitated by Kolkota Sanved group. This session provided psycho-physical techniques to help participants shift to a more positive self image and to release trauma. This was followed by the “Art to Healing” session led by Lydia Tan, which tackled issues that caretakers face such as compassion fatigue, vicarious traumatization and burn-out.

Results and recommendations from the three workshops and two interactive sessions will be shared with all participants. If you would like further information about the Asia Regional Consultation please contact our Asia Regional Programme Officer, Aatcharaporn Chaowahem: aat@gaatw.org.

Training manual to fight trafficking in children
ILO, UNICEF and the Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking (UN.GIFT) launched the "Training manual to fight trafficking in children for labour, sexual and other forms of exploitation". This manual is unique in that it specifically focuses on children, includes a special emphasis on labour issues, and is geared towards training. It is comprised of textbooks for self study and an exercise book with a selection of assignment options that trainers can choose from for tailor-made training courses. The manual addresses the needs of governments; workers’ and employers’ organizations; and NGOs and international agencies working at the policy and outreach level.
The publication is the result of an Expert Group Initiative on child trafficking, led by ILO and UNICEF and implemented under UN.GIFT.

"Pushed Back, Pushed Around" published by Human Rights Watch
The 92-page report, "Pushed Back, Pushed Around: Italy’s Forced Return of Boat Migrants and Asylum Seekers, Libya’s Mistreatment of Migrants and Asylum Seekers," examines the treatment of migrants, asylum seekers, and refugees in Libya through the eyes of those who have managed to leave and are now in Italy and Malta. It also documents Italy’s practice of intersecting boats of migrants on the high seas and sending them back to Libya without the required screening.

Report of an International Workshop organized by PICUM, Migrants Rights Network and Centre on Migration Policy and Society (COMPAS) on "Understanding Irregular Migration in Northern Europe"
This report highlights key points as a result of discussions from the “Clandestino” project, an interdisciplinary project funded by DG Research of the European Commission. Nearly 150 representatives of NGOs and trade unions, researchers, local authorities, policy makers, journalists, and other professionals came together at the workshop to discuss policies and responses to irregular migration in the United Kingdom, France, the Netherlands, Germany and Austria.

"The Gender Dimension of Domestic Work in Western Europe" by Maria Gallotti and published by the International Labour Office (ILO)
This report examines the current situation of domestic workers in Western Europe, focusing in particular on women migrant workers. The report recognizes that many domestic workers, especially irregular migrants, are particularly exposed to exploitation and abuse. It explores how domestic work manifests itself and how it is regulated in the current western European context. It argues that exploitation arises from a complex interaction of factors only partially linked to the “vulnerabilities” of migrant women. The report has three main sections: migrant workers in the domestic sector; selected case studies and initiatives to organise and provide protection to migrant domestic workers in Europe; and final conclusions and recommendations.

In Nairobi on 11 September 2009, the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) has released a manual to help build capacity among criminal justice practitioners to prevent and combat human trafficking. The Anti-Human Trafficking Manual for Criminal Justice Practitioners is a practical guide and training tool based on the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and Palermo Protocols. The manual explores a victim-centred approach to effective law enforcement and is based on the experiences of more than 45 judges, prosecutors, investigators, academics and NGO and inter-governmental organization representatives. http://www.alertnet.org/thenews/newsdesk/IRIN/2bff4c13f88d572e81854ac3bc181a14.htm

International Service for Human Rights (ISHR) report on the panel on “The Rights of Migrants in Detention Centers”
On 17 September 2009, the Human Rights Council held a panel discussion on “the Human Rights of Migrants in Detention Centres”. During the discussion many States provided elements that could contribute to a compilation of best practices in the area. Although many of the statements were critical of the practice and conditions of detention of irregular migrants, the tone of the debate was largely constructive. In the report, the High Commissioner of Human Rights has declared the issue of migration as one of the thematic priorities for OHCHR over the next biennium. http://ishr.us1.list-manage.com/track/click?u=97549cf8cb507607389fe76eb&aid=f5255b0783&e=9658f6ea7f

Book Review
The book The Slave Next Door by Kevin Bales and Ron Soodalter, examines modern-day slavery in America, building awareness of slavery's influence on our everyday habits and inspiring action to prevent and combat slavery as consumers, citizens, and activists. The book covers every major policy and practice related to slavery and trafficking. The authors explored the divisive term "severe form of trafficking," which appears in anti-trafficking legislation. The authors argue that only the "severe" forms count as trafficking. The feverishly moralistic attention given to sex by anti-prostitution abolitionists, politicians, and the media often takes much-needed attention away from forced labor and other forms of trafficking. Readers should take to heart the more subtle message here, which is that ending slavery will ultimately require a human rights-based approach rooted in solidarity with workers around the world, not just changes in legislation and trade agreements.

Events
There will be a national symposium on sex workers rights to be held on November 18 at the Old Parliament House in Canberra, Australia. OHCHR Recommended Principles and Guidelines on HR and Human Trafficking Consultation
A resolution submitted by the Filipino and German delegations to the Human Rights Council in its June session requested the OHCHR to solicit views on the Recommended Principles and Guidelines and to gather experiences and emerging good practice in their application. For the purposes of soliciting views on the Recommended Principles and Guidelines: the OHCHR asks all stakeholders:

a.) Has your organisation used the Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights and Human Trafficking in developing and implementing anti-trafficking strategies and activities? If so, has your organisation found the application of a human rights-based approach to combating trafficking effective in your anti-trafficking activities?

b.) In applying the Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights and Human Trafficking, what are the experiences in emerging good practices which helped improve the measures taken to prevent trafficking and protect and support victims of trafficking? How has your organisation measured success in combating human trafficking from a human rights perspective thus far?

c.) In applying the Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights and Human Trafficking what, if any are the challenges your organisation has experienced in achieving results to combat human trafficking?

The result of this consultation will be presented at the seminar on rights based approaches to trafficking in February 2010.

Any responses to these questions should not exceed 3 pages and must be sent to Mariana Katzarova, Adviser on Human Trafficking, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights: mkatzarova@ohchr.org / fax: +41 022 928 9010 no later than the 16 October 2009.

We also use this e-bulletin to inform members about upcoming events and provide regular updates about the Secretariat.
- We strongly encourage members and friends to send us their input to the e-bulletin at info@gaatw.org
- If you do not want to receive this e-bulletin please send us a message at info@gaatw.org and we will delete your address from the list.

Dear Members and Friends,

Welcome to the October issue of the e-bulletin. Yet another year is coming to an end and we at the International Secretariat took some time this month to review our work to date and discuss plans for 2010. As you are already know in 2010 GAATW will hold its third International Members Congress and unlike the previous two this one will be held in mid-year. Not surprisingly much of our planning discussions focused on the upcoming Congress and the Conference that will precede it.

This issue of our bulletin draws your attention to the latest report of the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking to the United Nations General Assembly and the recent discussion in the UK on the Government’s anti-trafficking initiatives.

We are pleased to share news from GAATW members in Europe, Asia and the Americas: La Strada Ukraine’s latest report on monitoring Ukrainian governmental trafficking activities, La Strada International’s upcoming NGO platform meeting in Berlin and it’s EU Anti-trafficking day Statement, FIRST Canada’s open forum on sex workers, clients and the law and news from Asia, Komnas Perempuan’s successful forum in Jakarta urging the new Indonesian government to ratify the Migrant Workers Convention. Our warm wishes to Manjuati, a new self-organised community women’s group in India for successfully concluding a training in acupressure massage and opening a massage center soon after. The resources section, brings you references to several interesting and relevant report and researches.

In October we warmly welcomed back Ms. Julie Ham to the GAATW family. Julie was a programme officer during 2007 and rejoins the team now as the programme coordinator.

Warmly,

The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

SR on Trafficking’s Report to the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA)
The recent Report of the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, Ms. Joy Ngozi Ezeilo, to the United Nations General Assembly deals with protection, identification and assistance. It covers the period from 1 October 2008 to 30 September 2009. Ms. Ezeilo’s report mentions the importance of non-conditional assistance which is a key issue for GAATW and one which we encourage her to address in her report to the Human Rights Council next year. The report can be downloaded at http://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/GA/64documents.htm GAATW members may recognize cases they have submitted to the SR in the report which demonstrates an extremely positive example of engagement with Ms Ezeillo, we hope that such interactions continue.

UK ANTI-TRAFFICKING RAIDS ON SEX WORKERS FAILS TO FIND ANY TRAFFICKED PERSONS

The UK's largest anti-trafficking initiative, Operation Pentameter Two, targeted sex workers in hundreds of raids over a six month period by government departments and police forces throughout the country yet failed to find any trafficking victims. Nick Davies of the Guardian disclosed the failure of Operation Pentameter Two and argued that the scale and nature of trafficking into prostitution has been exaggerated by politicians and media.

English Collective of Prostitutes responded: “Nick Davies' report (“Sex, lies and trafficking -- the anatomy of a moral panic” Guardian, 20 October 2009) vindicates what we have been saying for many years: figures on the numbers of women trafficked into the sex industry are distorted and in many cases purely fabricated”.

http://www.prostitutescollective.net/Trafficking_Enquiry_Vindicates_Sex_Workers_PR.htm

Caroline Hames, GAATW IS International Advocacy Officer, provided a comment to the Guardian and argued that the government must address the severe exploitation of irregular migrants in the UK and look at the more complex factors that cause trafficking rather than detaining sex workers or pulling support away from irregular migrants.

NUMBER OF TRAFFICKING VICTIMS ALMOST HALF IN FIRST SEMESTER OF 2009

In Bucharest more than 800 students participated in a preventive seminar about human trafficking in time for the European Anti-Trafficking Day. The National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons announced that the number of people who have been victims of human-trafficking declined by almost half in the first six months of 2009, compared to the same period last year. Most of the cases reported were trafficked for begging. Authorities added that women aged 18 to 25 are mostly likely to become victims of trafficking for sexual exploitation, and men aged 26 to 40, for labour exploitation.

MONITORING UKRAINIAN GOVERNMENTAL COUNTER TRAFFICKING ACTIVITIES

La Strada Ukraine has published its results from monitoring the implementation of the National Action Plan on trafficking in human beings for the period 2007-2008. Anti-trafficking activities in Ukraine have been affected by political instability, partly as result of the parliamentary crisis, early parliamentary elections and a halt in parliamentary proceedings from February to December 2007, which resulted in the rejection of a number of important laws, particularly in gender equality, violence and children’s rights. Changes in personnel and unfamiliarity with human rights issues at the governmental level have further aggravated the activities of NGOs and led to the postponement of already developed and scheduled programmes. The report provides a detailed overview of the legal situation in Ukraine, the status of ratification of international conventions, and identifies gaps and needs, not only at the legal but also at the practical level, and is available in English and Ukrainian.

LA STRADA INTERNATIONAL NGO PLATFORM MEETING

On November 9th and 10th, La Strada International (LSI) will organise its 4th NGO platform meeting in Berlin, Germany - together with host German NGO Ban Ying. The decision to organise this year’s NGO platform in Berlin, outside a La Strada country, was made in order to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall on November 9, 2009.

The platform is linked to this special occasion and the issue of standard setting. Under the title: “20th years after the fall of the Berlin Wall - where do we stand?” LSI will discuss with its NGO partners in the field, how NGOs cope with current realities in the anti-trafficking field and how to best serve the interests of trafficked persons within the system. The main focus of the NGO platform of this year is standards and agreements for NGOs’ role, work and services and to look critically at the position of NGOs. For more information, contact LSI at info@lastradainternational.org

ANTI-TRAFFICKING DAY STATEMENT

On the occasion of the European Union’s Anti-Trafficking day, 18 October 2009, La Strada International, together with GAATW and others, recommended that the European Commission work from a holistic and integrated approach. http://www.lastradainternational.org/?main=newsletter&section=newsfacts&news_id=321

SEX WORKERS, CLIENTS AND THE LAW

FIRST, a GAATW member based in Canada, will be hosting an open forum to hear more about the men who buy sex, the experiences of sex workers with their clients, and why neither sex workers nor their clients should be criminalised. “Sex Workers, Clients and the Law” will take place Monday, November 23, 2009, from 7-9pm, at the Vancouver Public Library (Alma Van Dusen & Peter Kay rooms), 350 W. Georgia, Vancouver, Canada. For more information, please visit www.firstadvocates.org or contact Esther Shannon at emls@shaw.ca or Tamara O’Doherty at tamaraodoherty@shaw.ca. FIRST is a national coalition of feminists that advocates for the complete decriminalization of sex work, for both sex workers and clients.

RIGHTS NOT RESCUE: AN OPEN LETTER TO THE SALVATION ARMY

There is increased attention around anti-trafficking issues in Vancouver, partly due to public confusion around the link between trafficking and major sports events. FIRST wrote an open letter to the Salvation Army in response to Salvation Army’s current “The Truth Isn’t Sexy” anti-trafficking campaign. FIRST expressed concern that the extreme imagery and conflation of trafficking with sex work in Salvation Army’s campaign would negatively impact sex workers: “We are horrified by your campaign’s images of sex workers. They themselves operate as a form of exploitation because you use them to capitalize on society’s fear of the sex industry to raise money. No one supports the exploitation of any person, but portraying all sex workers as abused victims and slaves essentially puts workers beyond human understanding and does absolutely nothing to stem the exploitation that does happen in the sex industry.” To read the whole letter, please visit www.firstadvocates.org.

MANJUATI OPENS MASSAGE CENTRE IN BHUBANESWAR, ORISSA, INDIA

Manjuati, a new self-organised community women’s group in Orissa, India, has been working on women’s health in five small villages and a slum area around Bhubaneswar. Although all members are dependent on daily wages for their survival they voluntarily give some time for women and children in their communities and share the knowledge they have acquired from a month long intensive training on women’s health held in 2008-9. During September 2009 the group got an opportunity to add another related skill to their repertoire. They received a two week long training in acupressure massage techniques from two Thai friends. Manjuati welcomed four visually impaired young women who were recommended by GAATW member Aaina to join the training. The training was a great success with enthusiastic participants working very hard to learn the skill of acupressure massage. Following the training Manjuati has opened a small massage centre for women in Bhubaneswar. We wish them success.

INDONESIAN MIGRANT WORKERS’ RIGHTS ALLIANCE URGES NEW GOVERNMENT TO RATIFY MIGRANT WORKERS CONVENTION
Komnas Perempuan and a migrant workers’ rights advocacy alliance held a show in Jakarta, “Sum: Cerita dari Rantau” (Sum: Story From Abroad) to urge the new Indonesian government to ratify the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (i.e. Migrant Workers Convention). The show portrayed the experiences of women migrant workers at home, in destination countries, and the negative experiences of women workers who’ve returned to Indonesia after working abroad, such as corruption and negative treatment from airport officials. More than a hundred people from civil society, government and national human rights institutions attended. Komnas Perempuan and the alliance will give a million signed cards calling for the ratification of the Migrant Workers Convention to the new Indonesian President, Susilo Bambang Yudoyono.

ASEAN PEOPLE’S FORUM 18-20 OCTOBER
Ms Rebecca Napier-Moore, Research & Training Officer, attended a part of the ASEAN People’s Forum (APF) hosted by civil society the weekend before the 15th ASEAN Summit. The second day of the APF was supposed to include dialogue with the government. About 4 officials were confirmed to participate in each session, however all but one sent their apologies at the last minute.

ASEAN is divided into 3 pillars, Socio-cultural (under which most civil society issues have been placed and where civil society enjoys the most access), Political Security (under which trafficking is placed in a crime control framework), and Economic. Please contact Rebecca Napier-Moore for more details rebecca@gaatw.org.

2ND ASIA PACIFIC CONSULTATION ON REFUGEE RIGHTS & UNHCR CONSULTATION ON MIXED MIGRATION IN ASEAN, OCTOBER 6-10, 2009, BANGKOK, THAILAND
Ms Julie Ham, Programme Coordinator attended the 2nd Asia Pacific Consultation on Refugee Rights (organised by the Asia-Pacific Refugee Rights Network or APRRN) and the UNHCR Consultation on Mixed Migration in ASEAN. Some network members stressed the importance of linking refugee rights groups with anti-trafficking groups and migrant rights groups and the need to think strategically and critically about the trafficking-refugee-migration nexus. Sessions also included updates on refugee issues in the Asia-Pacific, the protection of human rights defenders, ways for civil society and UNHCR to work together effectively, models of legal aid advocacy and network action planning for regional (South Asia, Southeast Asia, East Asia, Australia) and thematic (immigration detention, women and girls at risk, education, legal aid and advocacy, right to health, international advocacy) working groups. Training was also provided on working with refugees in detention and the mental health impacts of detention on refugees; for a copy of these presentations, please contact Julie at julie@gaatw.org or visit the International Detention Coalition website at www.idcoalition.org.
If your organisation works with refugees from the Asia-Pacific and would like more information about the network, please contact FORUM-ASIA at refugee@forum-asia.org.

DANCE MOVEMENT THERAPY WORKSHOP, 21-29 OCTOBER 2009, NEPAL
Providing care to trafficking survivors is a demanding task - caretakers interact with people who are in crisis and have to absorb client’s traumatic experiences and difficulties. Caretakers need to be cognizant of their own self-care to prevent stress and burnout. Recognising the demands of caretaking work, GAATW organised a Dance Movement Therapy Workshop for Shakti Samuha in Nepal, an organisation created and led by trafficking survivors to meet the needs of other survivors of trafficking. Ms Alfie Gordo, from GAATW-IS attended the training in Nepal, from October 21-29, 2009, as part of GAATW’s Realising Rights Programme. The aims of the Dance Movement Therapy Workshop are to introduce movements and exercise for trauma release, help participants shift to a more positive self-image, and allow social struggles to be worked through alternative movement outlets. The trainers, Sohini Chakraborty and Sreeja from Kolkata Sanved, led the dance movement therapy workshop for 23 participants. Several recommendations came out during the feedback and planning session. Participants highlighted the need to have a DMT workshop for all members of Shakti Samuha. The training session ended with a bonfire where participants shared their experiences and learning with the group.

RESOURCES

Reports
The report addresses the migration and development debate, moving away from what is becoming more mainstream government rhetoric, such as at the Global Forum on Migration and Development, through which governments are talking about using migration FOR development, and seeing migration AS the development strategy for many countries. The Human Development approach however attempts to put people at the center. It looks at human mobility as a key to realize human freedom, and lays out the case for governments to reduce restrictions on movement within and across their borders by analyzing barriers to movement, and how they are especially high for low-skilled people. At the Bangkok press conference the report’s main author Jeni Klugman said “Migration can help development but it is not a substitute”. On the topic of circular migration Klugman was critical that governments welcome high skilled people and rotate low skilled, “turning people on and off like a tap”.

For those wishing to use the report for migrant rights, there are helpful charts and graphs as well as some myth-busting statistics and arguments regarding displacement of local jobs, who migrates, and survey details of western country populations preferring permanent vs. temporary migrants. The report may not be radical or necessarily new, but it is a welcome voice. The report which was launched simultaneously in many parts of the world can be downloaded at http://hdr.undp.org/en/reports/global/hdr2009/#

UNITED NATIONS OFFICE ON DRUGS AND CRIME (UNODC) REPORT TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS; ANALYSIS ON EUROPE
The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) released a report showing that trafficking in persons is an undetected crime in Europe. The report shows a high degree of internal trafficking, both domestically within European countries and regionally within the European Union (predominantly from South-eastern to Western Europe). It also pointed out the progress that has been made to improve collection of data on human trafficking within the European Union. A full copy of the report is available at:

“AFFECTED FOR LIFE”
The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) launched a training video titled “Affected for Life” during EU Anti-Trafficking Day. The video is targeted for prosecutors, judges, law enforcement officers and other specialised audiences, and illustrates the elements and different forms of human trafficking. The video will also be used as an awareness-raising tool to exemplify some of the key aspects of human trafficking, including the differences between human trafficking and smuggling of migrants. The video is currently available in full-length and abbreviated versions in English; versions in other official languages of the United Nations will become available in early 2010.

LAUNCHING EVENT OF THE JOINT COUNCIL OF EUROPE/UNITED NATIONS STUDY ON TRAFFICKING IN HUMAN BEINGS FOR THE PURPOSE OF THE REMOVAL OF ORGANS
The event was organised by the Council of Europe and the United Nations and co-sponsored by Slovenia, as the country holding the current Chairmanship of the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe and Spain, as the country previously holding the Chairmanship of the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe and the world leader regarding organ donation and organ transplantation. The Joint Study was prepared in the framework of the co-operation between the two international intergovernmental organisations, in particular in keeping with the United Nations General Assembly Resolution on Co-operation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe (A/RES/63/14). The Joint Study is now available on-line. The Joint Study only covers trafficking in organs, tissues and cells (“OTC”) for the purpose of transplantation. Other purposes of trafficking in OTC are outside the scope of the Joint Study.

NEW PROTECTION MANUAL FOR HUMAN RIGHTS DEFENDERS (3RD EDITION) BY PROTECTION INTERNATIONAL Protection International’s (PI) new manual provides human rights defenders with additional knowledge and some tools that may be useful for improving their understanding of security and protection. PI hopes that the manual will support training on security and protection and will help defenders to undertake their own risk assessments and define security rules and procedures which suit their particular situation. This manual is the result of over 25 years combined experience of Protection International and PI members in working with human rights and humanitarian law and in the protection of HRD and other vulnerable groups. Most of the manual’s contents have already been applied in practice, either in protection work or in training workshops with defenders. The manual is available to download at:

DISPOSABLE LABOUR: RIGHTS OF MIGRANTS WORKERS IN SOUTH KOREA
In this report, Amnesty International documented how migrant workers often work with heavy machinery and dangerous chemicals without sufficient training or protective equipment, are at greater risk of industrial accidents including fatalities, and receive less pay compared to South Korean workers. “Disposable Labour” documents how the South Korean government has insufficiently monitored workplaces, with high number of accidents, inadequate medical treatment and compensation, and unfair dismissals.

VIOLATION OF MIGRANTS RIGHTS IN GREECE

Human Rights Watch (HRW) report on the violation of migrant rights in Greece called on the newly elected Greek government to end the abusive detention and summary expulsion of migrants, including unaccompanied children, and to reform the country’s broken asylum system. HRW also pointed out that Greece’s asylum system and detention conditions clearly breach EU law as well as European and international human rights standards. The European Commission remained silent and failed to hold Greece accountable despite ongoing criticism and recent worsening of the situation in both law and practice.

Dear Members and Friends,

Greetings from GAATW International Secretariat.

Welcome to our November-December issue of the e-Bulletin. GAATW IS wishes everyone love, light, joy and peace during the holiday season and a hope-filled New Year! We are once again coming to the close of a very fruitful year - highlighted by two regional consultations, SOG trainings, roundtable meetings and FPAR workshops and research.

2009 has been a challenging year for migrant workers and their families, with the financial global crisis, the lack of safety nets and rights protection, and reported incidences of xenophobia due to job insecurity. As the world celebrates the International Migrants Day on 18th December, let us all re-affirm and promote migration discourses that show stronger and empowered migrants who are determined to improve their lives.

In building a rights-based approach, let us remember to center the migrant women workers at the core of our anti-trafficking work. On this occasion, let us continue to recognise women’s agency by upholding women’s rights in making choices about their lives, about migrating and about work. We dedicate this issue to all migrant workers for their courage and endurance in overcoming the challenges in their pursuit of a better future.

GAATW office is closed for holidays from 19 December to January 3, 2010. Once again many thanks for your continued dedication and hard work. We hope that 2010 is one of great productivity for everyone.

Warmly,
The GAATW International Secretariat

GLOBAL HIGHLIGHTS

UN marks Human Rights Day with call to end all forms of discrimination ‘Embrace Diversity, End Discrimination’

The United Nations marked Human Rights Day on 10th December, the 61st anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, by stressing the enduring need to eliminate all forms of discrimination - particularly in crisis-plagued regions, appealing to governments for tolerance in the interests of peace. In a joint statement, the various independent experts who report to the Geneva-based UN Human Rights Council warned that efforts to end discrimination are falling short and that progress is even retracting in some instances. “Globally, stronger commitments and more determined action are required if we are to defeat discrimination,” they said. “Our ethnic, cultural or religious differences should be acknowledged, valued and respected, not seen as a threat to our unity as they too often are, but as a celebrated component of it.”

International Migrants Day celebration
To mark International Migrants’ Day (IMD) on December 18, Migrant Workers Centre (MWC) organised a series of activities, including a nine-course sit down dinner on December 15, in collaboration with four major dormitory operators. TWC2 (Transient Workers Count Too) also organised an outdoor picnic, to be held on December 20.

The IMD, which was proclaimed by the United Nations in 2000, is a day in which countries disseminate information on the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants.

Launch of 20th anniversary global campaign for migrants’ rights convention
The International Steering Committee for the Campaign for Ratification of the Migrants’ Rights Convention is launching a global campaign to end abuse of migrants, by protecting their human rights, on International Migrants Day.

The campaign will take to the streets and to parliaments, demanding that governments act immediately to end the widespread violations of human rights suffered daily by migrants around the world, by ratifying the UN International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (ICRMW)

Activities will take place in Brussels, Cairo, Geneva, Kuala Lampur, Nairobi, New York and Paris to mark the 20th anniversary of the adoption by the United Nations General Assembly of this core UN instrument.

Indonesia to decide on ratifying UN Convention on Migrant Workers
In February 2010, the Indonesian government will make a final decision on the appropriate time to ratify the United Nations Convention on Migrant Workers and their Families, a minister said. The country’s Justice and Human Rights Affairs Ministry commented that the lack of preparation in Indonesia has led to delay in the ratification of the Convention.

New law on organ trafficking
The new Penal Code in Spain will consider a bill making human organ trafficking a crime punishable with up to 12 years in prison, according to the Minister of Health and Social Politics, Trinidad Jimenez. Anyone who promotes, favours, facilitates or advertises organs or their illegal trafficking could be sentenced to between six and 12 years - if it is a vital organ, and between three and six years if it is a secondary organ. Organ recipients who are aware of the illegal origin of the organ may also be sentenced. Although it is not thought to be a widespread practice in Spain, there has been a noticeable rise in advertisements on the internet which offer organs for amounts ranging from 15,000 to 100,000 Euros. The Bill has been sent to congress for approval. The Minister said it was good news for Spanish people.

Two UN human rights covenants take effect: a big step forward

The Economic Community Of West African States (ECOWAS) Community Court of Justice - Niger violated its obligation to protect its citizen from sexual slavery

The Court found Niger in breach of its positive obligations to protect its citizens from slavery, which in Hadijatou Mani Korau’s case involved sexual slavery. The Court found that the applicant was held in slavery for nearly nine years. The elimination of slavery is a mandate of all States, entitling her to protection by the Nigerien authorities. The Court found Niger responsible under international as well as national law for any form of human rights violations founded on slavery because of its tolerance, passivity, inaction, and abstention with regard to the practice. They ordered Niger to pay reparations in the amount of 10 million CFA francs (approx. USD 23,100)

First caregiver court victory hailed: Caregivers fighting back in court

Filipina caregiver, Marivic Perlas Rivera, has won her civil suit against the recruitment agency that failed to provide her with legitimate employment in Canada. The caregiver was awarded the maximum amount allowed in Small Claims Court when the judge ordered Winlorfely Caregiver Providers to pay Rivera damages worth $10,000 and another $300 in costs. The lawsuit may mark a turning point in the fight against unscrupulous recruiters who bring foreign caregivers to Canada for jobs that do not exist. The caregiver’s triumphant civil suit is said to be the first of its kind in Ontario against a nanny recruitment agency.

Europe

La Strada International NGO platform on trafficking in human beings (Berlin November 9th and 10th)

Under the general theme: 20 years after the fall of the Berlin Wall - where do we stand? La Strada (with the support of Ban Ying) organised its 2009 NGO Platform in the German capital. The Platform was an opportunity for participants to share and to critically look at our own work as anti-trafficking NGOs. The fall of the Berlin Wall was the backdrop set to reflect about rights’ protection principles and daily practices; dilemmas and compromises, in areas such as social assistance (shelters rules); national referral mechanisms, campaigns and stereotypes; data collection and protection; working with partners; and transparency and democracy within our organisations. The objective of the meeting was to open up dialogue and share experiences around these issues and to try to find common standards in different. Discussions at the NGO Platform will feed into the book on standards that La Strada International is currently developing.

The NGO Platform also provided space for bilateral meetings and an open space where participants could present and discuss issues, share ideas or present their own initiatives. There was also time to share funny, scary and exciting anti-trafficking stories and time to dance and enjoy music. For us at the GAATW-IS it also provided a great opportunity to meet with members in the region and to get to know new organisations, and to exchange learnings with all participants. The setting of common standards from a rights perspective is key and we hope to continue accompanying La Strada in this journey.

Proyecto Esperanza celebrates its 10\textsuperscript{th} anniversary

To celebrate Proyecto Esperanza’s 10 years of work, they organised a 1-day event on December the 2\textsuperscript{nd}, the International Day for the Abolition of Slavery, in Madrid Spain. The celebration was an opportunity to reflect on the achievements of the last decade, but also to look forward at what still needs to be done to protect and promote the human rights of trafficked persons. People from NGOs, international institutions, national and regional government, and more, gathered in a warm atmosphere to carry out frank discussions and share common thinking.

Bandana Pattanaik, GAATW IS International Coordinator, contributed to the panel on International Perspectives, together with Mike Dottridge, Fanny Polania and a representative of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) Office of the Special Representative and Co-coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings.

We would like to congratulate Proyecto Esperanza for these 10 years of hard work, collaboration and commitment.

FIRST’s Forum: Sex Workers, Clients and the Law

FIRST, a sex workers rights group, held a packed public forum, “Sex Workers, Clients and the Law”, on November 23, in Vancouver, Canada. The forum began with the film: “A Swedish sex worker on the criminalisation of clients.” (Watch the video here: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7D7n0h57-I8.) Jody Salerno (Director of Women’s Services, the British Colombia/Yukon Society of Transition Houses), tells her story and stresses the importance of safe, effective and affordable housing for women, children and youth escaping violence.

Chris Atchison discussed his “John’s Voice” study, which gathered data from a sample of almost 1000 men and found the vast majority of clients to be ordinary guys who care about the welfare of sex workers and are not violent or exploitive.
(For more info see his webpage http://www.johnsvoice.ca/). Susan Davis talked about “Trade Secrets”, the new health and safety guide for sex workers, including dealing with clients. Check out the website here: http://www.tradesecretsguide.blogspot.com/). Tamara O'Doherty rounded off the panel by talking about the reasons we need full decriminalisation for both clients and workers. The Q&A session was lively and lasted almost an hour. FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Julie Ham, Programme Coordinator, met with sex workers’ rights organisations - Cambodia Prostitutes Union, Women’s Network for Unity and a representative from the Asia-Pacific Network of Sex Workers - during a recent trip to Phnom Penh, Cambodia. Rather than addressing the root causes and actual instances of trafficking, the Cambodian anti-trafficking law criminalises solicitation and is being used by Cambodian police to shut down sex workers’ worksites and abuse and extort money from sex workers (e.g. condoms taken as ‘evidence’ of criminal activity). Organisations also expressed concern that ‘rehabilitation measures’ are resulting in further human rights violations such as: committing further violence on sex workers, unsanitary conditions (impure drinking water, no bedding), detention and lack of treatment for persons with HIV (access to medication cut off). Reports/Published Articles
The book “Voices from and against detention centers for foreigners” is based on the testimonies of migrants, and that of their families, waiting to be deported, between 2007 and 2009. It illustrates rights violations in terms of health, living conditions, lack of access to lawyers, degrading treatment and so on. One key issue addressed is the lack of identification mechanisms available for asylum seekers and trafficked persons in detention centers. It is published by SOS Racismo-Madrid, Medicos del Mundo-Madrid and Ferrocarril Clandestino - a network of organisations in Madrid who support migrants’ rights.

The book is available only in Spanish and it can be downloaded from: http://www.lahaine.org/index.php?blog=2&p=2578. GAATW IS wishes to thank Helga Flamtermesky, from Sant Cugat Group in Barcelona for sharing this very interesting book.

PICUM’s: Main Concerns about the Fundamental Rights of Undocumented Migrants in Europe (2009)
This new report pieces together a year of European, national and local news issues on irregular migration. The report aims to foster a better understanding of the main human rights concerns of undocumented migrants and to analyse the ways in which civil society throughout Europe is responding to these issues. Available in English, French and Spanish at: www.picum.org
Laura Agustin’s The Ease of Righteous Causes: What to feel about undocumented migration tries to unpick and understand the complex and complicated ‘migrant journey’, with a particular focus on those in Calais, France trying to cross the Channel to the UK.

No Cushion to Fall Back on: the Global Economic Crisis and Informal Workers

Much has been said about the impact of the global economic crisis on those employed in the formal economy, while its impact on those employed informally has received little or no attention.

To address the gap Women in Informal Employment Globalising and Organising (WIEGO) and its partners in the Inclusive Cities project collected information on the impact of the crisis on three categories of workers: home-based workers, street vendors, and waste pickers. To

was first published by Infochange News & Features

This article argues that media coverage of trafficking of women and children, migration and sex work is confused and inaccurate. Media wrongly uses the terms ‘sex work’ and ‘trafficking’ synonymously, perpetuating stereotypes and stigmatisation and contributing to the violation of women’s right to free movement and livelihood options.

Events

The International Trade Union Confederation’s (ITUC) first World Women’s Conference,
"Decent Work, Decent Life for Women: Trade Unions Taking the Lead for Economic and Social Justice & Equality"

The conference looked at the impact of the global crisis on working women and explored how to ensure that related issues are part of trade union responses. It is expected that a second congress will take place next year. A press release issued by ITUC stated that: “discussions at the Conference focused on the fact that although women have increasingly become part of the paid workforce and of trade unions, and there have been important achievements in trade union organising, collective bargaining, and other rights, women are “often in a disadvantaged position in comparison to men in labour markets around the world [and that] in most regions, the gender impact of the economic crisis in terms of unemployment rates is expected to be more detrimental for females than for males” as highlighted, in the ILO report on Global Employment Trends for Women 2009. Conference delegates expressed deep concern that the commitment to advancing gender equality must not eroded by the global economic crisis. Strong support was given to the 2009 International Labour Conference resolution on gender equality which pointed out that “crises should not be used as excuses to create even greater inequalities nor undermine women’s acquired rights”. The Conference highlighted priority issues for women at work and in society and politics, such as the rise of women in precarious work in recent years, which has left many women in short-term jobs with low pay, little or no protection from exploitation, and lacking social security and pension entitlements”.

Anti-Trafficking and the Media

Ms Vathany Say, Executive Director of the Cambodian Women’s Crisis Center (CWCC), gave a presentation on “Anti-Trafficking and the Media” at the 33rd International Association of Women’s Radio and Television (IAWRT) Conference, Beijing +15: Empowering Women Through Media, November 17-21, Phnom Penh Cambodia. She encouraged media present to genuinely inform the public about trafficking by accurately reflecting women migrant’s complex lived realities in their work rather than perpetuating sensationalistic and voyeuristic stereotypes about trafficked women. For more information on CWCC, please visit cwcc.org.kh. For more information on IAWRT, please visit www.iawrt.org.

2010 International Conference on Marginalised Women
To celebrate International Women’s Day on 8 March, the Isis Centre for Women and Development (based in Fes, Morocco, and directed by Dr Fatima Sadiqi) is organising an international conference (8-10 March 2010) on marginalised women: single mothers, divorced women, widows, household breadwinners. I.e. women, without a male partner, who are seriously threatened by the impact of the financial crisis. Discussing these categories of women is still taboo in the overwhelming majority of the Arab-Islamic countries, sub-Saharan Africa and the countries of the global South.

In addition to plenary sessions, the conference will feature workshops with grassroots activists, visits to three listening centres, life stories, and awards for a number of successful local women.
Interested scholars/activists or post-graduate students are welcome to contact Fatima Sadiqi at sadiqi_fatima@yahoo.fr
